If you want to know, really know, about two top tier financial dynasties, in depth, you’ll read this and the equally important sequel. By most standards it’s lengthy; however, teaspoon research can’t convey large insight into such groups. Rothschild this, Rothschild that, Rothschild everything, is as wrong as wrong can be. They have an important place in the scheme of things, but in no way does this exclude OTHER dynasties! I suggest you download this PDF and the similarly detailed sequel to your files and read at your convenience, as few will have the staying power to read it nonstop! Naturally none of the “leading” sites will allow linkage to these research documentaries, as they collectively made decision long ago to black out my research! I was however mentioned at Sprott Money by Jeff Nielson. The Sprott folks really couldn’t let me in on my own standing; I had to be piggy backed in on one of their selected favorites; which is far more than GATA ever allowed me.

This is written for all the poor sad confused simpleminded souls who think all you need to say about world finance is “Rothschilds,” a truly sad misguided blundering joke for people too lazy to do profound research. World finance is a large patchwork quilt with many important dynasties involved. At the head of these dynasties stand the Windsors; not the Rothschilds. The Windsors sponsor The Pilgrims Society “a secret society gradually absorbing the wealth of the world.” If other names in finance were unimportant, they wouldn’t be members! We’ll focus on the Astor and Drexel dynasties; both Episcopalian/Anglican; and connected by marriage. I wrote several items last fall as to current Rothschild representation in the “network.” I haven’t minimized their importance, but object to it being carelessly overblown by stupid low IQ Jew-baiting hicks who can’t even pronounce “Roth-schild” (Red Shield; “child” does not exist in this name) correctly such that people think there’s no need for spotlighting any other families. World’s wealthiest religious groups 1) Anglican/Episcopalian by an embarrassingly wide margin; and 2 or 3, Jews or Catholics; inconclusive, but the Vatican seized huge wealth for centuries all over Europe and through the Spanish and Portuguese colonial empires! Some key Jews and top Catholics appear in Pilgrims rosters. The Catholic members are never in the open as to being members of this Royalist organization. Jews who wanted to climb the power ladder have converted to Episcopal Church; in America, notably the Schiffs, with David T. Schiff, third generation member, being Episcopalian and a Pilgrims official. The Episcopal Bishop of New York is always a Pilgrims V.P.! This reflects the history of the English monarchy tracing back nearly 500 years to King Henry VIII giving the Roman Pontiffs a severe lesson as to who would be dominant in the British Isles!

“THE ELITIST PILGRIM SOCIETY SEEKS TO MERGE THE UNITED STATES INTO THE BRITISH COMMONWEALTH AS A BASE FOR WORLD GOVERNMENT. The major international banking firms

---pages 484 and 513, “America’s 60 Families” by Ferdinand Lundberg, 1937. There is no evidence that Lundberg was aware of The Pilgrims Society. Before proceeding, a loud objection must be raised against an outrageous myth that has been spread about for years and it’s <https://www.bibliotecapleyades.net/bloodlines/> which purports the following 13 families dominate the world---Astor; Bundy; Collins; Du Pont; Freeman; Kennedy; Li; Onassis; Reynolds; Rockefeller; Rothschild; Russell; Van Duyn. Only names likely to belong are Astor, Rockefeller, Rothschild and maybe Du Pont. The rest are unadulterated gibberish garbage! They are too lacking in power/wealth to remotely belong; the Kennedys and Onassis are just about nowhere and two Kennedys were rubbed out. On any list of 13 (and that number is hokey anyway due to some special aura it’s imputed to have) you’d see Windsors at the top; Grosvenors; Mellons; Astors; Rockefellers; Livingstons; various others; the rankings are at best conjecture; but so many names represent more power than the absurd selection of Bundy, Collins, Freeman, Kennedy, Li, Onassis, Russell and Van Duyn, it’s not even funny. Drexel (a name we’re taking a LONG HARD look at here), Delafield, Aldrich, Winthrop, Keswick, FitzAlan Howard, Cadogan, Vanderbilt, Duke, Warner and many others Bayard, Schuyler, Van Rensselaer, Cavendish including, yes, Roosevelt---are awesomely more influential than Bundy, Collins et al. Hopefully this hokey 13 list is now down the toilet.

Ten property dynasties – and the families behind them | Family Capital

Nov 11, 2015 - Nevertheless, the Astor money, much of it from property, was so vast that even today it filters ... on the ownership of many prime properties in Tokyo and other cities throughout Japan. .

Readers new to The Pilgrims Society (Pilgrims, not Pilgrim, excuse the hair splitting) can get overview at Silver Stealers site. We want to look at two dynasties related by marriage, who are historic suppressors of monetary silver. The Astor/Drexel or if you prefer the Drexel/Astor dynasties, and other dynasties with whom their lines intersect, are insinuated deeply in the roots of the modern J.P. Morgan Chase Bank colossus which consensus has as the lead silver suppressing megabank. People who are very lazy say things like “the Rothschilds run England and Europe and the Rockefellers run America.” Having decided this on flimsy evidence, they have no idea that in fact, many wealthy families seeking more power and control are in on The Plan to beat the common man down. The Astors came here from Germany; the Drexels came here from Austria. The Drexels were Roman Catholic in their origins. However as we shall see, they stepped across the chasm and became Episcopalians (Church of England); the English Astor branch, which became the main Astor branch by 1959, became Anglicans (same as Episcopalian). 1959 was the year that Pilgrims Society member Vincent Astor passed away. One very famous female Drexel family member did get Papal recognition as a Roman Catholic Saint; this we will touch on. The Astors in America, what remains of them, are Episcopalian. Most of the Astors relocated to England and are naturally members of the Royal family's Protestant Anglican Church of England. The Vatican is not a member of the Anglican dominated World Council of Churches. The Drexels and Astors have had historic ownership representation in what eventually became J.P. Morgan Chase Bank, as we shall see. Their ownership today is quite unknown except to them and bank upper management. They are clearly involved in other enterprises as we shall see. The Drexel line intersected with the Biddle line of the second United States Bank! (Forerunner of the Federal Reserve System!) The Federal Reserve families are very heavily Episcopalian and you can forget about "the Rothschilds own the Federal Reserve" if you want to step past fairy tales and kid stuff! They probably have some fraction of it! The Astors and Drexels have been VERY close to the English Royal family, sponsors of The Pilgrims Society!

“The Astor family today is well known as one of the world's most prominent business and political dynasties.”

The Pilgrims of the United States

Naturally this is a married couple; the financial history they represent is staggering. Chase National Bank over 100 years ago was often referred to as the “Astor-Rockefeller” bank. The Drexels were very profoundly associated with J.P. Morgan & Company. As these interests merged, so too did these dynasties merge by marriage. America Incorporated is hardly any “Rockefellers only” affair, but several dozen dynastic families predominate, while the new rich get the attention, the old rich control. We’ll review this Pilgrims Society couple later. First we need to review the history of what led up to their union. We’ll start with the Astors, as their dynasty founder arrived in America in 1783 or 1784 versus Drexel (1817). Astor arrived with an inventory of seven flutes to sell!

John Jacob Astor was born in Walldorf Germany on July 17, 1763 (deceased 1848). In 1785 he married Sarah Cox Todd (1761-1832); they had 8 children (born 1788-1802), 3 of which died in childhood. Astor had some income from a butcher shop and selling musical instruments but very early switched to the fur business. By 1801 Astor was shipping furs to China and bringing back silks, spices and tea. He allowed his wife $4,000 per day for her personal interests (early 1800s). Of their children, Magdalena (1788-1832); Sarah Todd Astor (born and died in 1790); John Jacob Astor Jr. (1791-1869); and William Backhouse Astor Sr. (1792-1875) are enough to mention. The Astors became related to other important dynasties---

Winthrop; Stuyvesant; Livingston; Schermerhorn; Roosevelt: Obolensky (old Russian nobility) all of which came to be Pilgrims Society represented. Astor was an important early funder of the New York Public Library. We need to review John Jacob Astor's brilliant (and shocking) career next. Founder of the Astor dynasty, John Jacob Astor (July 17, 1763 to March 29, 1848) ---Astor was a Mason and was Grand Treasurer of the Grand Lodge of New York---he is said to have been worth $138 billion in 2018 dollars; as we shall see, the current Astors doubtless represent much more than that! --- "Astor will be remembered as a tyrant, unethical and ruthless businessman"--

This boosted his seed capital---

Astor became known as “Landlord of New York;” however, several other dynasties represented in The Pilgrims Society, though not at the top of the Manhattan/Long Island real estate kingdom as the Astors, were nonetheless major owners (and remain so today). Some names come to mind---Beekmans, Schermerhorns, Goelets, Vanderbilts, Rockefellers, Mortimers, Iselins, to name a few.

Gustavus Myers (1872-1942) wrote
and released in 1908---

HISTORY OF THE GREAT AMERICAN FORTUNES

Myers made no mention of the Drexels, nor of San Francisco gold mining kingpin James B. Haggin (Pilgrims 1907) nor of many other important wealthy men; however, let's not fault him too much, as those he did describe, he did a fairly thorough job on, with the one big failing of not mentioning certain "by invitation only” membership organizations in which the cartel wealthy conspire against the public. Myers description of the Astors and the original J.P. Morgan has very choice info nonetheless which we’ll look at some excerpts of following. He described the Astors on pages 109 through 241. On July 17, 1763, John Jacob Astor was born in Waldorf Germany and died on March 29, 1848 in New York. Astor started with Robert Bowne, a New York merchant; the name Bowne occurs in rosters of The Pilgrims Society over 200 years later; and Astor, much more so. Astor married Sarah Todd, a relative of the old-line Dutch colonial Brevoort family of landowners; the great George F. Baker line (Pilgrims Society; banking and dozens of railroads) and that of the Schiffs (Pilgrims Society) are linked by genealogy to the Brevoorts, who owned large acreage in downtown New York. Astor started as a fur trader ripping off native tribes and addicting them to booze, very much like his British pals addicted Chinese to opium to get paid in silver. According to The New York Sun, April 21, 1912, page 5, on a voyage to London to market expensive furs, Astor conferred with the head of the British East India Company (opium; often called history’s most evil company, easily eclipsing Monsanto). We read further the BEIC official “presented him with authorization to trade in the (Chinese) ports then monopolized by the East India Company.” Early on Astor had enough gains to have his own ocean sailing cargo ships and to make more money as a shipper and exporter of furs to England, France, Germany and Russia.

John Jacob Astor was pre-eminently the opener of new paths, a breaker of trails. From his first tramp alone through the Black Forest of Baden, at sixteen, his life never lost this typical touch. In America, both shores of the Hudson, and the wilderness to the Northwest knew his trail. The trees of the forests west of the Mississippi were blazed by his hunters and trappers; and his partners and agents planted through this vast region the flag of the American Fur Company. The Atlantic and Pacific Oceans were invisibly lined by the path of his vessels. His were the first American ships to habitually circle the globe, trading around the earth. With his far-sighted vision withdrawn from distant scenes, and centered on Manhattan Island, he led the way toward the upbuilding of the largest, and most important city in the new world.

In 1808 Astor started his American Fur Company with $500,000 after he and other operators nearly exterminated fur bearing animals in the northeast and deprived native tribes of their source of protective winter clothing. Book released in 2010 soft peddles the Astors---

This source shows Astor turned $2 invested into $97.96 as a matter of habitual routine, exclusive of the stunning value his realty holdings would take on and “when he got dominance in an area, “he cut salaries from $100 a year to $250 every three years.” We also read “as his health was deteriorating he focused on getting every last penny from tenants.” Frame #17 of that link shows---

● Ethics

- Abuse of workers by ordering to work unlimited hours, in hazardous conditions and extreme weather leading them killed while decreasing the salaries
- Over priced the trade goods when people are desperate
- Did not give much to charity
- Influenced congress for his own benefits

Frame #21 shows---

Q4. WHO WERE THE MOST IMPORTANT STAKEHOLDERS OF THE NINETEENTH-CENTURY FUR INDUSTRY? WERE THEY TREATED RESPONSIBLY BY THE STANDARDS OF THE DAY? BY THE STANDARDS OF TODAY?

- Most important stakeholders are
 - Workers (native Indians)
 - Customers (Europeans)
 - Inhabitants (fur producing areas)
- They were not treated responsibly because
 - Indian culture was totally destroyed
 - The ecology of the north American territories were extensively damaged
 - Tribes were abused and destroyed by alcohol, venereal diseases and small pox etc
 - By today's standards, AFC would not exist due to their unethical practices

Astor had another similar enterprise, the Southwest Company; the American Fur Company and Astor's naming of Astoria, on the Oregon Pacific coast is better known. Astor founded Pacific Fur Company in 1811, subsidiary of American Fur Company; Astoria was initially called Fort Astoria and was staffed by 61 armed men.

Present day Astoria Oregon (population 9,862) ---

Since converted into apartment units---

Astor was known to be a British collaborator at the outbreak and during the War of 1812, which England started because we didn't renew the charter of the first United States Bank! Myers documents the fact of Astor being a British collaborator and how Astor gained favors from Albert Gallatin, wealthy Swiss immigrant who became Treasury Secretary, 1801-1814. Gallatin line is also Pilgrims Society represented! "Astor's agents brought the furs in company with British troops" this Myers showed with Senate documents from 1821-1822. Myers detailed how Astor's armed fur traders took over the Missouri River and resorted to murders to gain control! “The American Fur Company overawed and dominated everything. The exploitation that ensued was one of the most deliberate, cruel and appalling that has ever taken place in any country” (pages 114-115).

Astor stole from native Americans by turning them into full blown alcoholics; page 116 has Myers mentioning one instance of 5,800 gallons of booze destined for distribution, turning tribes into slave addicts for Astor's fur trade. Page 119 shows Astor's booze was marketed to tribes at $50 a gallon, again giving Astor shocking gains! These furs acquired by theft were sold to upper crust in New York, Philadelphia, Boston and Washington for insane markups, and also exported to England and Europe. With these profits Astor bought up land on the fringes of growth around New York City. When the growth reached Astor's landholdings, his worth soared.

Page 120 has Myers detailing how Astor shipped large quantities of near worthless junk trinkets which were traded to tribes for furs; these junk trinkets were manufactured by child labor in shocking poverty paid nearly nothing! Astor's agents charged mark ups in the hundreds of percent; undercounted and short weighed furs brought in by tribes; and pillaged them relentlessly so that when they objected, troops were sent for from Washington to suppress them. Astor's front line fur trappers were paid in merchandise, scandalously overvalued. Astor had the services of Senators and the top attorneys defending and enhancing his empire that stretched from New York to the Pacific Ocean. Page 130 has Myers reporting a $35,000 bribe Astor made to Secretary of War, Lewis Cass (1782-1866), to suppress tribes not "cooperating" with Astor.

Lewis Cass, Astor hit man---

Page 130 has Myers on Astor's ocean shipping business, making up to $70,000 profit on a single shipment of tea and silk from the Far East; later the British allowed Astor a piece of the Chinese opium "trade;" Myers reported, "During the War of 1812 to 1815 tea rose to double its usual price. Astor was invariably lucky in that his ships escaped capture." Surprisingly for an otherwise smart investigator, Myers never realized Astor wasn't lucky with the British---he was favored by them. The Astors have been British loyalists for more than two hundred years! Pages 139-140 has Astor stealing the homes and lands of 700 families in New York state, all under the color of law, including improvements on the lands and their agricultural value, on which Astor made $400,000. 1991 book below mentions (page 174) Astor's instructions to conceal opium imports into China inside furs---their opium dealing in China was from 1816 into the early 1830s (page 322) ---Astor even had some Chinese as servants in his New York mansion---

“After the panic of 1837 Astor’s wealth multiplied to an enormous extent” (page 138). Digression briefly to page 38 of “New York for Sale” (2011) ---

Some have dreamed of having a huge slice of it. In the nineteenth century, John Jacob Astor “became the wealthiest man in the United States” by investing in New York City real estate. Astor bought land cheap in the panic of 1837, foreclosed on mortgages, and increased his fur-trading fortune when the market went up.¹ Speculators have been falling all over each other trying to reproduce the Astor miracle ever since.

Returning now to “History of the Great American Fortunes”---

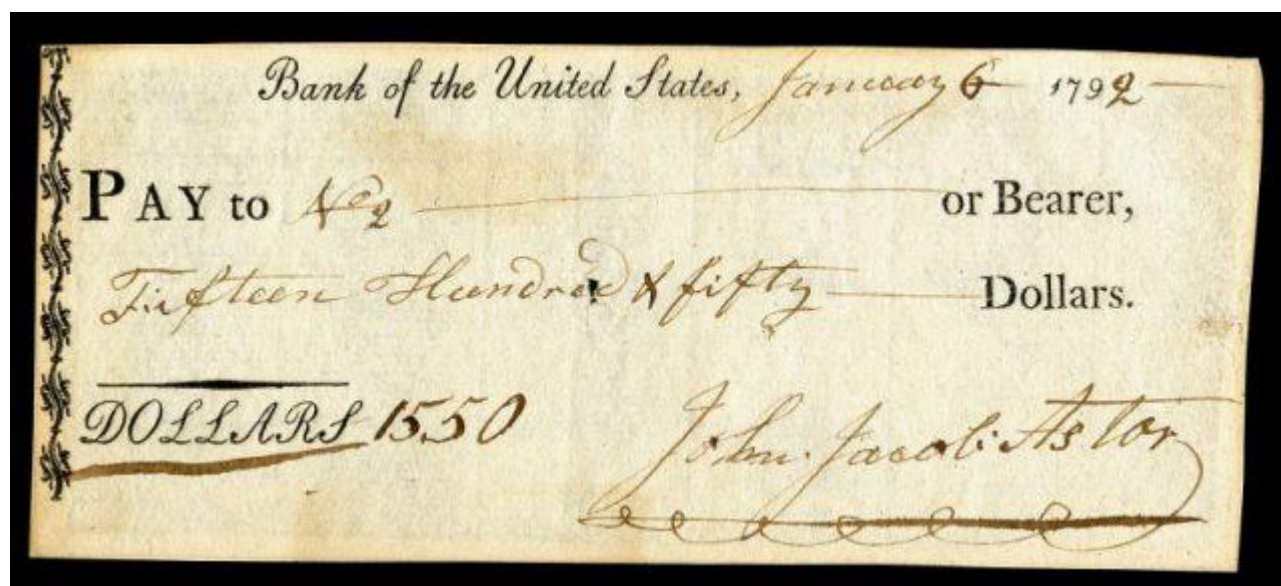

Page 143, “Astor obtained enormously valuable land grants (around New York) for practically nothing.” Page 144 has mention of a man named Goelet (several Goelets are in The Pilgrims 2014; they were among the founders in 1823 of Chemical Bank, now part of J.P. Morgan Chase!) Page 148 has Myers stating other names in NYC land grabs---Havemeyer, Kissam, Vanderbilt, Rhineland, Dodge and Roosevelt---all names found in then future Pilgrims Society rosters! Page 151 shows Astor was buying numerous lots for $200, which as of the year of Myers book being published, were worth $400,000! Yes, that’s 20,000 to ONE returns for the Pilgrims Society ASTORS! Page 152 showed Astor had time for lesser deals; an estate he obtained for $75,000 resulted in a $500,000 annual return to his Mariana Trench deep pockets! Page 153 shows

Astor got a parcel for $23,000, which by 1908 was worth $6,000,000! It also shows Astor foreclosed and for $25,000 got “a sweep of land” valued at $25,000,000 by 1908! Page 154 has Myers remarking---

A photograph of a book page with a highlighted section of text. The text is in a serif font and reads: "Not a single one of Astor's biographers has mentioned his banking connections. Yet it is of the greatest importance to describe them, inasmuch as they were closely intertwined with his trade, on the one hand, and with his land acquisitions, on the other." The page is aged and yellowed.

Not a single one of Astor's biographers has mentioned his banking connections. Yet it is of the greatest importance to describe them, inasmuch as they were closely intertwined with his trade, on the one hand, and with his land acquisitions, on the other.

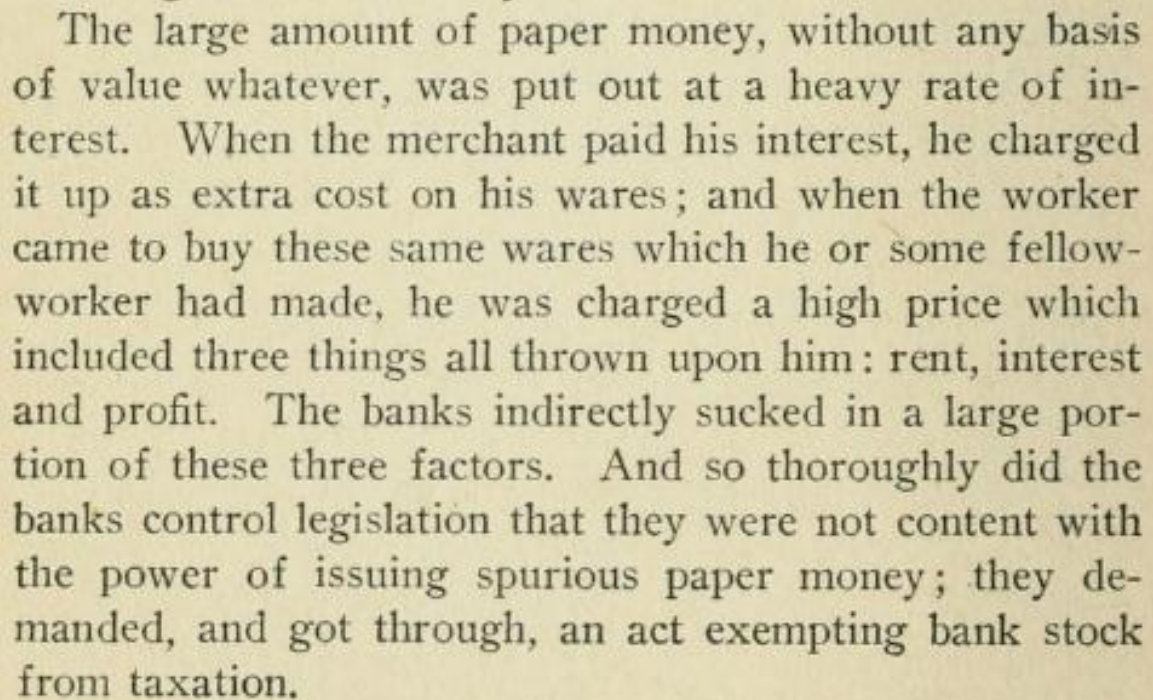

However, Myers didn't mention that Astor had been a director of the second United States Bank which was in business 1816 to 1836. In fact, Astor was the main domestic power in that bank; and possibly may have had more influence in it than any London interests, be they Rothschilds, Barings or Royals. This I haven't formed conclusion on; there was also a DuPont on its board, and Nicholas Biddle was its best known figure. The Biddles came to be related by marriage to the Drexels as we shall see. Astor also had dealings via the first United States Bank---in which at that time (1792) Stephen Girard was the top honcho---

New York institution of to-day) was accomplished by bribery. The Chemical Bank was an outgrowth of the Chemical Manufacturing Company, the plant and business of which were bought expressly as an excuse to get a banking auxiliary. The Goelet brothers were among the founders of this bank. In fact, many of the great landed fortunes were inseparably associated with the frauds of the banking system; money from land was used to bribe legislatures, and money made from the banks was employed in buying more land. The promoters of the Chemical Bank set aside a considerable sum of money and $50,000 in stock for the bribery fund.⁶ No sooner had it received its charter than it began to turn out reams of paper money, based upon no value, which paper was paid as wages to its employees as well as circulated generally. So year after year the bribery went on industriously, without cessation.

Page 168 shows John Jacob Astor was a nominal Lutheran (Protestant Christian) so; he was neither Jewish nor Catholic! However, another source says Dutch Reformed Church; in any case, he wasn't Jewish or Catholic. Page 170 has this (Astor was a big shareholder in multiple New York Banks) ---

The large amount of paper money, without any basis of value whatever, was put out at a heavy rate of interest. When the merchant paid his interest, he charged it up as extra cost on his wares; and when the worker came to buy these same wares which he or some fellow-worker had made, he was charged a high price which included three things all thrown upon him: rent, interest and profit. The banks indirectly sucked in a large portion of these three factors. And so thoroughly did the banks control legislation that they were not content with the power of issuing spurious paper money; they demanded, and got through, an act exempting bank stock from taxation.

Page 174 has Myers mentioning the Panic of 1837, and failed to state this was directed from London, and it was caused strictly by banks suddenly and as a coordinated phalanx, refusing to redeem their paper notes in either gold or silver "specie" ---

Passing over the Equal Rights movement in 1834 which was a diluted revival of the Workingmen's Party, and which, also, was turned into sterility by the treachery of its leaders, we arrive at the panic of 1837, the time when Astor, profiting from misfortune on every side, vastly increased his wealth.

The panic of 1837 was one of those periodic financial and industrial convulsions resulting from the chaos of capitalist administration. No sooner had it commenced, than the banks refused to pay out any money, other than their worthless notes. For thirty-three years they had not only enjoyed immense privileges, but they had used the powers of Government to insure themselves a monopoly of the business of manufacturing money.

However! Myers did get to the suspension of specie payments (pages 176-177).

THE MOMENTUM OF THE ASTOR FORTUNE

It was at this identical time, in the panic of 1837, that Astor was phenominally active in profiting from despair. "He added immensely to his riches," wrote a contemporaneous narrator, "by purchases of State stocks, bonds and mortgages in the financial crisis of 1836-37. He was a willing purchaser of mortgages from needy holders at less than their face; and when they became due, he foreclosed on them, and purchased the mortgaged property at the ruinous prices which ranged at that time."¹

Next we notice at page 197---

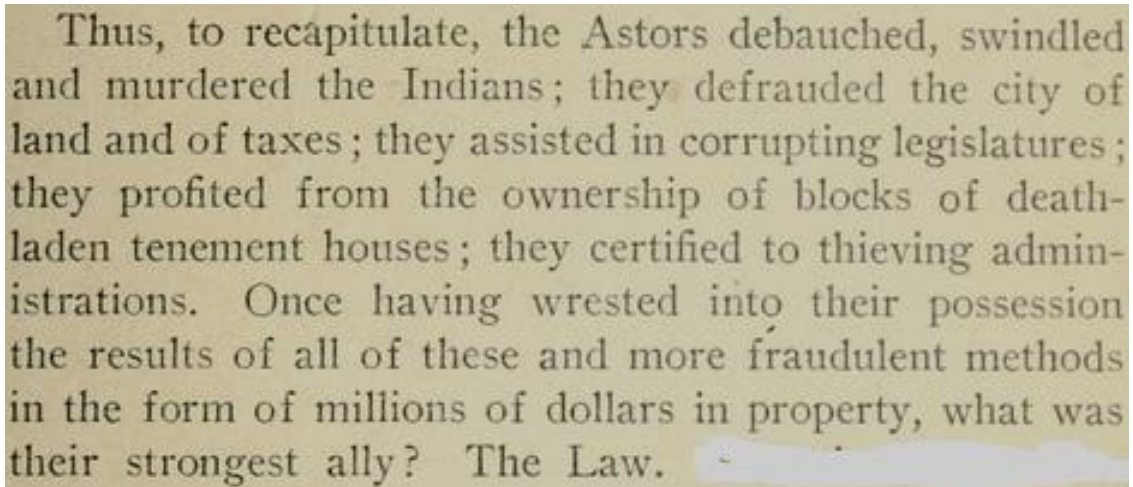

It can be at once seen in what transcendent degree Astor's wealth towered far above that of every other rich man in the United States.

At no time in American history has any one man loomed so large in wealth as Astor; John D. Rockefeller reached greater wealth, but in his time there were other titans, Astors still and finally, Vanderbilts and others. Astor had little competition for top rank, in his time, in the same way that an earlier titan, English loyalist Stephen Girard (1750-1831) of the first United States Bank, towered high in wealth. When the first U.S. Bank was shuttered in 1811, in which Girard was the primary domestic power, Girard bought the Philadelphia HQ building and there opened Girard Bank.

ASTOR'S TOWERING WEALTH.

His fortune was the colossus of the times; an object of awe to all wealth-strivers. Necessary as manufactures were in the social and industrial system, they, as yet, occupied a strikingly subordinate and inferior position as an agency in accumulating great fortunes. Statistics issued in 1844 of manufactures in the United States showed a total gross amount of $307,196,844 invested. Astor's wealth, then, was one-fifteenth of the whole amount invested throughout the territory of the United States.

Page 209, J.J. Astor's son William B. (died 1892) became a large shareholder in the massive New York Central Railroad along with J.J. Astor Jr. (mid 1860s). Therefore they were involved with the Vanderbilts, who became to railroads what the Astors were to New York City real estate. Page 222, in 1875 William B. Astor was owner of "more than 700 buildings and houses, not to mention the many unimproved tracts of land he held." Page 224, an Astor married a Schermerhorn, lesser known and smaller real estate barons, yet still staggeringly wealthy. We find the name Schermerhorn in later lists of The Pilgrims! Page 227---

Thus, to recapitulate, the Astors debauched, swindled and murdered the Indians; they defrauded the city of land and of taxes; they assisted in corrupting legislatures; they profited from the ownership of blocks of death-laden tenement houses; they certified to thieving administrations. Once having wrested into their possession the results of all of these and more fraudulent methods in the form of millions of dollars in property, what was their strongest ally? The Law.

Page 229, "In 1875 William B. Astor builds a railroad in Florida, and as a gift of appreciation the legislature presents him with 80,000 acres of land." Page 234---shows the persistent lowballing of old rich fortunes is nothing new---

The fortune left by John Jacob Astor II in 1890 amounted to about $150,000,000. The bulk of this descended to his son William Waldorf Astor. The $75,000,000 fortune left by William Astor in 1892 was bequeathed to his son John Jacob Astor. These cousins to-day hold the greatest part of the collective Astor fortune.

Estimates were from publicly accessible documents only!

Having reached the present generation, we shall not attempt to enter into a detailed narrative of their multifarious interests, embracing land, railroads, industries, insurance and a vast variety of other forms of wealth.

The collective Astor fortune, as we have said, amounts to $450,000,000. This, however, is merely an estimate based largely upon their real estate possessions. No one but the Astors themselves know what are their holdings in bonds and stocks of every description. It is safe to venture the opinion that their fortune far exceeds $450,000,000. Their surplus wealth piles up so fast that a large part of it is incessantly being invested in buying more land. Originally owning land in the lower part of Manhattan, they then bought land in Yorkville, then added to their possessions in Harlem, and later in the Bronx, in which part of New York City they now own immense areas. Their estate is growing larger and larger all the time.

Now for something on the original Astor from another source---

<https://www.history.com/news/americas-first-multi-millionaire-250-years-later> (History dot com is wrong; Stephen Girard of Philadelphia was America's first multi-millionaire with around $6 million as of his death in 1831---regardless, let's see their info on Astor---

“After the War of 1812 ended in 1815, Astor successfully lobbied the U.S. Congress for a series of protectionist legislative bills designed to prevent a repeat of his financial losses in the Pacific Northwest. When Congress passed an 1816 bill barring non-U.S. citizens from owning fur businesses in U.S. territory, the same Canadian company that had purchased Fort Astoria was forced to sell all of their holdings below the Great Lakes to Astor. Six years later, Astor received additional aid from the U.S. government when Congress voted to close all trading posts operated by foreign governments, leaving Astor with a near monopoly on the fur trade.”

“While his lobbying of Congress continued, Astor briefly turned his attention away from the fur trade. In 1816, he purchased 10 tons of opium from the Ottoman Empire (modern-day Turkey) and shipped it to Canton, China, aboard one of his American Fur Company ships—despite China's banning of the drug 17 years earlier. After turning a tidy profit on the illegal enterprise, Astor abruptly ended his involvement in 1819. Astor was the first American known to traffic the drug in China, but certainly not the last—several early American fortunes were built on the Chinese opium trade, including that of Warren Delano Jr., the grandfather of President Franklin Delano Roosevelt.”

More from History dot com--- (a site which would NEVER mention The Pilgrims Society) ---

Though he had dabbled in real estate speculation on earlier occasions, Astor's first big land deal came in 1807, when former Vice President Aaron Burr was arrested for treason for his involvement in a plot to annex territory in Louisiana and Mexico to establish an independent republic. The financially beleaguered Burr, who had already heavily mortgaged his Manhattan estate, known as Richmond Hill, appealed to Astor for help. Burr had been acquitted, but his reputation was in ruins and he sought a new start in Europe. Desperate for cash, he agreed to transfer the deed to Richmond Hill to Astor for just $32,000—in what Burr later maintained was to be a temporary agreement. Astor, of course, saw nothing temporary about the transaction. In the coming decades he would carve up hundreds of parcels of land from the former Burr estate, negotiating ever hire rental agreements with tenants. As the city of New York expanded northward, Astor sold his already developed land for fresh parcels, following the construction routes of municipal services such as water and transportation lines uptown. By the 1830s, Astor had fully retired from the fur business and devoted his time to his real moneymaking venture, New York City real estate.

Page 249 of the following book (2001) had the author griping about “hard money advocates;” meaning he favors paper money systems run by swindlers; then in light of that stance, the mixed up author still complained on page 4 that Astor was

“a slumlord, a war profiteer and a ruthless jobber who shipped opium to China, and sold liquor to Indians knowing the devastating consequences.” These are very poor researchers, History Dot Com and this Axel Madsen, both saying Astor was America’s first multimillionaire when that distinction falls to Stephen Girard, as we saw. Vanity Fair Magazine committed the same obvious error. Still another allegedly well researcher author, Alexander Emmerich in his 2013 book “John Jacob Astor and the First Great American Fortune” committed the same easily avoidable error; useful however as he noted on page 100 that Astor was a director of the second United States Bank and on page 99 admitted, “Astor and his partners were the most significant force in the establishment of the bank” (note--- Girard was very close second to Astor in forming the second U.S. Bank---not the Barings and not the Rothschilds! It was only later they brought in Nicholas Biddle to front for them as the bank’s president!)

Madsen was employed in the 1950s with the New York Herald Tribune, owned by the Reid family (Pilgrims Society and silver suppressors; Ogden Reid voted for the 1965 Coinage Act) so naturally why would Madsen mention Astor’s descendants became Pilgrims Society members, he didn’t mention it---page 167 mentions “In February 1817, the Astor ship Seneca reached Canton with a cargo that included 5.7 metric tons of opium” ---

As I long suspected, John J. Astor was involved with members of the Saint George's Society in New York City---this group, still very much in existence, was the original "Pilgrims Society" until January 1903 when The Pilgrims Society was organized; reason being, there was just too much great wealth outside Manhattan, and they wanted to toss their organizational net over the whole country---and they did, bringing in such western gold mining giants as James B. Haggin and Darius Ogden Mills. The 2005 book "John Jacob Astor Landlord of New York," page 97, mentions Astor being chummy with members of the Saint George's Society, established in NYC in 1770 as a British loyalist front.

At <https://founders.archives.gov/documents/Madison> we read John Jacob Astor contacting Treasury Secretary Albert Gallatin (1761-1849) and whining for another central bank (the first was abolished in 1811 when Congress lacked votes to renew its perverted charter) and therefore we were gifted with the War of 1812---Gallatin's descendants became Pilgrims Society members---

In "A Century of Banking in New York 1822-1922" by Henry W. Lanier we notice on page two---

Notwithstanding the magnitude and success of Mr. Astor's business operations, yet the greatest source of his wealth has resulted from the increased value of real estate consequent on the continued growth of the city. At an early day he foresaw the future greatness of this commercial emporium of the Western Continent, and was wont to convert two-thirds of his annual gains into real estate, not one foot of which he ever mortgaged. It has been his policy to invest in mortgages on the best property offered, and in case of fore-closure, which has often happened, he has bought the property in at much less than its real value. In this mode, together with the continually increasing value of real estate, in this city, he has multiplied his wealth far beyond the natural accumulation by the ordinary interest, and hence too the bulk of his property. Mr. Astor has vast tracts of land in Missouri, Wisconsin, Iowa, and other part of the West, the prospective value of which is very great. The greater portion of his property is in real estate and mortgages in this city. Could Mr. Astor's property be kept unbroken and under its present management, it would become the largest individual estate ever known on the globe.

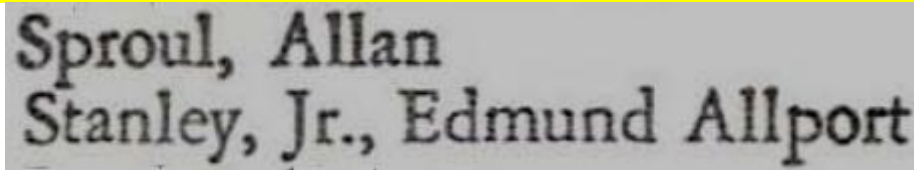

A reference at the Robert Bowne Foundation shows that John Jacob Astor was in the employ of Robert Bowne, a merchandiser in New York as of 1784. An obituary for Edmund Allport Stanley Jr. failed to mention Stanley was a member of The Pilgrims NYC at least as of 1969---

<https://www.fhnfuneralhome.com/obituaries/EdmundA-Stanley> ---

Mr. Stanley served in the 175th Infantry in World War II in Belgium and France and was awarded the Bronze Star Medal and Purple Heart. Following the war, he graduated a member of Princeton's Class of 1949.

That year he went to work for Bowne & Co., Inc., a financial printing company headed by his father. The company, founded in 1775 by Robert Bowne, is the oldest business in New York State operating under the same name since its founding. He was Chief Executive Officer of the company from 1956 until his retirement in 1986. Under Mr. Stanley's leadership the firm concentrated on serving the needs of the financial community including mergers, public offerings, and acquisitions. With its increased market share (its sales volume had doubled in five years) the firm was gradually able to buy out its major competitors. When Stanley retired in 1986, Bowne & Co., Inc. had become the largest corporate and financial printing firm in America, with a national and worldwide clientele. In 1968 he took the Company public.

This strategy is nothing new. One of the most well-known examples of Land Banking over the past 500 years is John Jacob Astor, who used this strategy to become the first multimillionaire in the United States. He realized the power of Land Banking when he purchased large tracts of land which are now known as "Manhattan". He acquired this land at a time when nobody else realized the opportunity. At the time of his death, Astor's estimated net worth would have been equivalent to $110.1 billion in 2006 U.S. dollars, making him the fourth richest person in American history.

William Backhouse Astor---1792-1875
Sure! He was a moral outhouse!

William Backhouse Astor was the second son of John Jacob Astor and became the richest man in the U.S. upon his father's death. John Jacob Astor Jr. (1791 to 1869) W.B.'s older brother was alleged to have been sickly and "unstable;" William inherited the enormous Astor landholdings. According to Gustavus Myers in "History of the Great American Fortunes" (1909, page 117) circa 1860 the Astors were major beneficiaries of so-called "water front grants" which "extended thirty miles around New York." Estimates vary, but some sources claim the Astors achieved ownership of 29% of all the land in New York City! (Note on this link; it's still a good link; in January 2015 when I found the 29% claim there I added that tidbit to Silver Squelchers #9; now I check the same link to reconfirm the 29% claim, and someone has since deleted it from that page. They corrected a slip-up. Of course the Astors were involved with smaller but significant realty operators such as the Iselins and Roosevelts (Pilgrims Society represented today); see for ex

The Livingstons, while less wealthy than the Astors, were still immensely wealthy large scale landowners; a Livingston negotiated the huge Louisiana Purchase from France in 1801! Armstrong's Senate career was only around 22 months; he was U.S. Minister to France (1804-1810) and interim Minister to Spain (1806). Armstrong's father in law, Robert Livingston (1718-1775), was a member of the old Whig Party (favoring a central bank!) ---

Chanler was a Congressman from New York. The Dudleys also appear in this genealogy and along with the Winthrops are Federal Reserve players; other frightening dynasties also appear in this picture including the Vanderbilts. Chanler was also GG son of Peter Stuyvesant, last Dutch governor of New Netherlands, renamed New York. Emily Astor married Samuel Cutler Ward (1814-1884) who is remembered as "King of the Lobby," and essentially the originator of the widespread practice of lobbying Congress! Ward's father was already worth several million in 1814, making him a smaller version of Astor the First; in 1838 Ward got $5 million from the Bank of England for financial subversion activities; he was an Episcopalian. In 1876 James Keene, who later became a charter Pilgrims member in 1903, gave Ward $750,000 in a "private" arrangement and Ward had "mysterious schemes" in Mexico. Emily Astor's descendants married into other dynastic lines including Beekman & Delano & Aldrich. The Pilgrims London 1936 shows Lewis Stuyvesant Chanler! Naturally he was Episcopalian! W.B. Astor Jr. married Caroline Webster Schermerhorn (1830-1908; ancestor arrived in the New World from Holland in AD 1643) on September 23, 1853, at Trinity Episcopal Church in New York. Caroline also had Van Cortlandt ancestry (huge Dutch colonial era landowners around Albany New York); the Schermerhorns were a scaled down version of Astor real estate wealth, and held mercantile interests. “Beechwood” mansion owned in Newport Rhode Island by W.B. According to <http://www.newyorksocialdiary.com/social-diary/2011/the-first-four-hundred> “Caroline (Webster Schermerhorn) Astor ruled New York society in the last quarter of the nineteenth century.” Caroline Webster Schermerhorn got the extra middle name Webster because her mother was the best friend of Mrs. Daniel Webster. Yes! You can find Webster’s statement against paper money; however, apparently that was only to mislead, as Daniel Webster was a branch director at Boston of the perverse second United States Bank; Webster defended legal challenges against the bank and very likely was acquainted with the original John Jacob Astor, top domestic power in that central bank! Van Alen, also wealthy in real estate, donated $50,000 to the successful Presidential campaign of Grover Cleveland (charter Pilgrims member in 1903); Cleveland was very bitterly opposed to silver money! ASTOR, COL. JOHN JACOB

According to "The Pilgrims of the United States" (short run book, 2003, page 86), John Jacob Astor IV "joined The Pilgrims in 1904."

On April 15, 1912, this particular Astor was on the famous "Titanic" when it was sunk in an iceberg collision. Several other prominent men went down; as far as I know, Astor was the only Pilgrims Society member on board. Benjamin Guggenheim of copper, lead, zinc and silver mining and smelting was a victim as was Isidor Straus. Oscar S. Straus (Pilgrims 1908) and Ambassador (1909-1910) to the Ottoman Empire (now Turkey) was brother of Isidor Straus, owners of the large Macy's department store; since its inception, certain Jews have been members. Some say J.P. Morgan Sr. (1837-1913) was behind a conspiracy to sink the Titanic because he wanted to get rid of Astor, Guggenheim and Straus. By the way, the Jewish Guggenheims converted to Episcopal church in order to gain status with the British Royal family; details, see the August 2017 release "Vast Mining Fortune Represented in Pilgrims Society World Money Trust" ---

http://www.silvermarketnews.com/articles/VastMiningFortuneRepresented_Savoie082517.pdf

Morgan was big in International Mercantile Marine which owned White Star Line, operators of the vessel Titanic. There are power conflicts within The Pilgrims, but regardless that certain members may hate other members, none will go public about The Society. The Titanic was under-insured by several million; not counting the lives of its passengers. My opinion is Morgan was evil enough to have done anything, but in fact, this was a maritime accident. It costs much less to hire some shooters or poison dealers to rub someone out. Regardless, as of 1912 John Jacob Astor IV was dead, and the leadership of the Astors in America immediately fell to Vincent Astor (November 15, 1891 to February 3, 1959) who was about twenty and a half years old at the time. According to “The Day Book” (Chicago, April 16, 1912, page 4) a man named A.J. Biddle represented the Astor estate! This was the same Astor line as the original John Jacob Astor and the same Biddle line of Nicholas Biddle, both tracing to the second United States Bank! Additionally we notice this from the New York Tribune, September 21, 1919, page 10---the Biddles and Drexels are related by marriage; more importantly, the Astors and Drexels are also! ---

Nicholas Biddle, who is the manager of the business affairs of the estate of which Vincent Astor is head, said that the sales by Mr. Astor of the Schermerhorn Building, on Broadway and Wall Street, and the Putnam Building, in Times Square, were only coincidents and had no particular significance.

Jan 1, 2017 - The sinking of the RMS Titanic may have been caused by an enormous fire on board, not by hitting an iceberg in the North Atlantic, experts have claimed, as new evidence has been published to support the theory.

The financial and social prestige of the Astor family led to significant roles in the economic development of the nation. The fortune accumulated in furs and real estate was employed to reach out into railroad, shipping and other transportation fields. It was a natural development from economic power to political influence.

The Pilgrims New York 1908 shows George C. Boldt (1851-1916), Astor's subordinate associate; a quick look at the other

Harry Black was son in law of George A. Fuller (1851-1900) remembered as “the father of skyscrapers.” A later president of the Fuller construction empire was L. Revere Crandall (Pilgrims) who constructed the United Nations Building. Some of these men above were members of The Pilgrims at the time of the advertisement; others became members later; certain others never became members. Notice Robert W. Goelet; several Goelets are in The Pilgrims 2014 roster; this Society is absolutely a multi-generational conspiracy. Besides Vincent Astor, George Baker was a member, and the only other member on this list who could compete with him in wealth, though perhaps still come up short; Baker was on over 50 railroad boards! Notice Charles Tiffany of the sickeningly overpriced snob jeweler, Tiffany & Company, which later became a Silver Users Association member. Gates McGarrah was in as of The Pilgrims 1919; he became first president of the Bank for International Settlements (1930-1933); he came to that post from the chairmanship of the Federal Reserve Bank of

New York. Astor Trust Company eventually merged into Bankers Trust, one of the so-called Morgan banks; however, due to shallow research, most people aren't aware that J.P. Morgan Sr. and Jr. weren't powers in themselves regarding these various banks; they were very wealthy; but they were professional managers acting for several dozen Pilgrims Society dynasties. This shows the Astors had representation in the J.P. Morgan sphere and also in the Chase National Bank arena, which eventually merged in 2000. Seward Prosser (Pilgrims 1914) was of the Seward family line of Secretary of State Seward who made the Alaska Purchase from Russia in 1867. The Prosser and Mellon (Pilgrims) lines also intersected. Benjamin Strong of the NYFED died early and may have been on The Pilgrims waiting list; his son surfaced in the 1957 list. Francis Hine was in the 1914 roster. John Irving Downey appeared in later lists. Downey, the youngest in the above list, made it into The Pilgrims by 1940 and was a director of Metropolitan Life; New York Telephone; Bankers Trust; Provident Loan Society (glorified pawn shop); N.Y. Presbyterian Hospital; he was with the War Industries Board in 1918 ("Who's Who in America," 1948, page 675.) Astor Trust Company merged into Bankers Trust New York as of March 30, 1917 (New York Sun, April 1, 1917, page 13).

Albert Henry Wiggin (1868-1951, Pilgrims roster 1924 and other years) was a Rockefeller family agent, and a liaison to the Astors (Pilgrims Society) via his board membership in Astor Trust Company and Astor Safe Deposit Company ---

In “Wall Street People---True Stories of the Great Barons of Finance” by Charles Ellis and James Vertin (John Wiley & Sons, 2003), we find on page 183---

“Wiggin’s prestige and influence were, in fact, international. When a man was needed to represent American interests in connection with more than half a billion dollars of frozen German credits, he was the one selected. He was a member of the board of directors of many important corporations---no less than 59 in all. He was a director and member of the executive committee of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York.” We note additionally at <http://fraser.stlouisfed.org/docs/historical> that Wiggin was “a member of the Gold Fund Committee.” “Who’s Who” volumes show Wiggin was on at least 68 boards; not 59!

In fact, while Wiggin chaired Chase, he was also a Wells Fargo & Company director (page 2352, "Who's Who in America" 1930-1931).

Financier, Businessman, Philanthropist. The son of Colonel John Jacob Astor IV, he entered Harvard University only to leave after the death of his father in the sinking of the "RMS Titanic". He was the first Astor, in several generations, to take active control of the family investments, with interests in automobiles, shipping and air transportation, as well as the ancestral involvement in Manhattan, New York City, New York real estate. A Commodore of The New York Yacht Club, his yacht, "Nourmahal", was utilized for geographical and zoological research and exploration, donating the vessel to the government at the outset of the Second World War. He was the owner of "Newsweek Magazine," director of Western Union, the Chase Manhattan Bank, and The United States Lines, and was a trustee of the New York Public Library and the New York Zoological Society. During both World Wars he served as a staff officer in the United States Navy; he was a retired Captain in the Naval Reserve. He married in 1914 Helen Dinsmore Huntington, patroness of The Metropolitan Opera. Without issue, he founded 'The Vincent Astor Foundation', which has distributed over one hundred million dollars for the benefit of the citizens of New York. Originally buried at "Ferncliff," the Astor country estate at Rhinebeck, Dutchess County, New York, he was later transferred to Sleepy Hollow Cemetery.

Bache (grandson of an officer under Napoleon) was a member of the Bankers Club and the Economic Club, both profoundly in opposition to monetary silver; he was president of Dome Mines, later renamed Placer Dome, a major gold mining company. He founded the investment bank, Bache & Company, which helped sink the Hunt brothers silver play in 1980. Bache was a director of Tennessee Copper & Chemical; Chrysler Corporation; Southern Agricultural Company; Ann Arbor Railroad; Cuba Distilling Company; United States Industrial Alcohol Company; Louisiana Oil Refining; American Indemnity Company; Anniston City Land Company; Motor Products Corporation; New Amsterdam Casualty Company (connection to old Dutch wealth); New Rivers Collieries; Empire Trust Company; Manistique & Lake Superior Railroad and others (same volume, page 203).

Vincent Astor's wife was heir to two estates, Huntington and Dinsmore. According to info, Vincent Astor caught the mumps from someone at the ceremony and it culminated in him being sterile! That didn't stop him from his life of service to the English Royal family and battling against public benefit in gold and silver! This probably resulted in the English Astor branch overshadowing the USA family branch as of Vincent's demise in early 1959. The Madera (California) Mercury, May 8, 1914, page 3, reported the Episcopal marriage ceremony on a 400 acre estate with armed guards---

RICHEST YOUNG MAN IS MARRIED

Simplicity Marks Wedding of Vincent Astor and Miss Helen Huntington

STAATSBURG, N. Y., May 1.--William Vincent Astor, son of the late Colonel John Jacob Astor, and Miss Helen Dinsmore Huntington, whom he has known since childhood, were married here yesterday in the big oak-panel library of Hopeland House, home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert P. Huntington.

Less than fifty persons witnessed the ceremony, and of these three were the superintendents from the Astor, the Huntington and the Dinsmore estates respectively. The other guests were relatives and close friends of the families. Plans had been made for an elaborate church wedding, but Astor's recent illness, which threatened pneumonia, made necessary the abandonment of these plans.

Small Company sees Wedding

Eighteen hundred wedding announcements were sent out after yesterday's ceremonies, but the small company that witnessed it had been invited by informal notes, penned by Mrs. Huntington's secretary.

A fine rain was falling when the few guests from New York city arrived at the 400-acre Huntington estate. Guards had been posted at the entrances and only those whose credentials were unquestioned were admitted. Astor himself is a deputy sheriff of Dutchess county, and some of his fellow deputies acted as sentinels at the gates.

Gorgeous Gift of Pearls

Miss Huntington entered the room on the arm of her father. At her throat gleamed a gorgeous necklace of pearls, the gift of the bridegroom. Her bridal gown was of white tulle with a train of white satin. Her lace veil had been worn by her grandmother, Mrs. Dinsmore, and by her mother before her.

Herman Oelrichs of New York, an old friend of Vincent Astor, was best man. Miss Alice Huntington, sister of the bride, acted as maid of honor, and the little Misses Muriel Astor and Margaret Dows were flower girls. Mrs. Robert Huntington, the bride's mother wore blue taffeta and -chiffon.

Screened Orchestra Plays

A screened orchestra of twenty pieces played the Lohengrin wedding march and Rev. Charles H. Duncan, rector of St. Margaret's Church, Staatsburg, read the Episcopal marriage service. When the pair had knelt before him and had risen man and wife, the wedding party assembled in the "long room" adjoining the library, where a wedding breakfast was served.

Mrs. Ava Willing Astor, mother of the bridegroom, was among the guests. The young widow of Colonel Astor, although invited, was not present. She is in the south.

NOTE NICHOLAS BIDDLE! Direct descendant
Of Nicholas Biddle, president of the
THIEVING second United States Bank
(1816-1836) ---

Some of the Guests

Among others present were Robert Huntington, the bride's brother, who is home from St. Paul's school at Concord; Mrs. William B. Dinsmore, the bride's grandmother; Mr. and Mrs. William B. Dinsmore Jr., the bride's aunt and uncle, with their two children; Miss Madeline Dinsmore, another aunt; Mrs. Charles Duncan, wife of the rector who performed the ceremony; Nicholas Biddle, one of the executors of the Astor estate; William A. Dobbyn, secretary of the estate; Mr. and Mrs. Archibald Rogers, and Mr. and Mrs. Tracy Dows, neighbors and old friends, whose little daughter was a flower girl.

Bride is Tall and Blonde

Vincent Astor is 22 years old; the bride is 20. She is tall and blonde. He, too, is tall. Both are lovers of the out-of-doors and if his health permits they probably will take an extended honeymoon voyage on his yacht, the Naoma.

Until a week ago the young heir to the vast Astor estate, estimated at from $75,000,000 to $100,000,000 was confined to his room in the Huntington residence. While visiting his fiancée a month ago he became seriously ill with an abscess on his lungs and for a time there was talk of postponing the wedding. Although his physicians permitted him to go outdoors for the first time only four days ago, young Astor insisted there should be no delay.

Honeymoon at Fern Cliffe

It is understood Mr. and Mrs. Astor will remain at their country home, Fern Cliffe, at Rhinesbeck, not far from the Huntington place, for at least a month. At the end of that time they hope that Astor's health will permit them to have the delayed yachting cruise and to tour Europe, with a visit in England at the home of his mother Mrs. Ava Willing Astor.

The Huntington family declined to give out any list or description of the many handsome presents received by the bride. Most of these were taken immediately to safe deposit vaults in Poughkeepsie banks.

Two names especially are important to note in the above account. Nicholas Biddle of the same line as the president of the second United States Bank (forerunner of Federal Reserve); this more recent Nicholas Biddle I haven't found in Pilgrims lists; David H. Biddle appeared in the 1926-1927 roster; same family; after Andrew Jackson finally shuttered the second U.S. Bank in 1836, Nicholas Biddle used the then legally invalid banknotes he and his directors issued, to buy lots of land across Pennsylvania, regardless that he obtained valuable land for "shinplaster" banknotes! The other name is Herman Oelrichs (Jr.), whose line I haven't found in The Pilgrims; there are many significant people over the years not directly members, but close in with members; Vincent Astor probably represented the Oelrichs fortune by proxy, though much smaller than his own wealth. Oelrichs wealth came from ocean cargo freighting; to that we must add his mother was Theresa Fair, daughter of a Comstock Lode multimillionaire, Senator James Fair of Nevada, whose other daughter married into the Vanderbilt fortune, which came to be on equal footing with the boggling Astor wealth. Like the Astors and Vanderbilts, the Oelrichs had a mega-mansion in Newport, Rhode Island. Now to have a look at bio info supplied by Vincent Astor himself! Mount Astor, altitude 12,170 feet in Antarctica, is named after him for funding an expedition. Dear me, you mean to say the Rothschilds didn't fund it? No, an Astor funded it.

Vincent Astor was a large subscriber to the Anglo-French loan of 1915 ($500 million) which went to finance portions of World War One ("America's 60 Families," 1937, page 140). He was also a financier of the Republican Party before reeling FDR into his web.

So many members of this Pilgrims organization have been powers in major hospitals for more than a century; apparently they realized early on the usefulness of hospitals in sucking the public dry! The New York Chamber of Commerce campaigned against silver in our money system. THE SPIDER WEB OF WALL STREET

<https://artsandculture.google.com/exhibit> ---

Franklin Delano Roosevelt (1882-1945; New York State Senator 1911-1913; Assistant Secretary of the Navy 1913-1920 during which time he helped Pilgrims Society interests get Navy contracts; Governor of New York 1929-1932; USA President March 4, 1933 to April 12, 1945; two sons and a daughter in law became Pilgrims Society members; FDR had opium business ancestry via his Delano heritage tracing back to the original Mayflower; slave trading, steamships and railroads wealth via his Aspinwall ancestry) ---

Franklin Delano Roosevelt and William Vincent Astor, known as Vincent Astor, grew up as neighbors in New York's Dutchess County. From an early age, these two heirs to prominent families were destined to forge a friendship that would shape the future of America. Hailing from the upper crust of New York society, replete with wealth, prestige, and fame; the boyhood friends would grow and change the fate of America as the nation struggled through some of the most tumultuous decades in the history of the republic. Astor would grow to be one of America's greatest businessmen and philanthropists while Roosevelt would become one of the most important political figures in American history.

I'll be as direct as I can be! Regardless that the newspapers built FDR up as anti-Wall Street, the reverse was true. There isn't time here to touch on all important aspects of FDR; mainly he issued Executive Order 6102 seizing gold from Americans at Astor's behest, and that of other Pilgrims Society members like Thomas Lamont of J.P. Morgan & Company; Astor's ancestor, John Jacob Astor was himself a great gold and silver thief via his directorship in the second United States Bank (1816-1836); the Bank had 25 branches (the first U.S. Bank had 8); its paper notes were convertible into precious metal ONLY at the branch most distant from the issuing branch! Imagine the fraud involved of having notes issued at Portland, Maine, and having to travel to the New Orleans branch of the Bank to present them for conversion---or having to travel from Mobile, Alabama, to Portland to convert! Apologists of the Second Bank NEVER mention this awful fraud!

For several years dealing opium in China, Astor was compensated not only in silks, teas and ceramics but also in silver; now acting on a much larger scale, his descendant Vincent Astor used Roosevelt to steal gold from the public in 1933 and silver in 1934! Many specifics are in The Silver Stealers <http://silverstealers.net/tss.html> and many additional details, all highly documented, appear in “Metals Confiscation Facts & Prospects” released in summer 2009 which see at (NO “PAY WALL”) <http://nosilvernationalization.org/96.pdf>

Their common upbringing, family ties, and life-long friendship would allow these two extraordinary men to view each other as peers, trusted advisers, and close friends. Together, through loyalty to each other, self-sacrifice in the service of America, and visionary leadership, Astor and Roosevelt would maintain the friendship they had always cherished and shepherd America through some of its darkest hours. The boyhood friends would utilize every tool at their disposal in the service of America. For Astor that meant using his connections in banking and telecommunications, relying on a lifetime of management experience and even yachting to ensure the defense of New York.

Vincent Astor and his obvious subordinate Franklin Roosevelt didn't "shepherd America through some of its darkest hours;" more like THEY MANEUVERED AMERICA INTO SOME OF ITS DARKEST HOURS! They stole huge amounts of gold and silver from Americans; the gold figure is uncertain but the silver figure is 113,031,000 ounces; as British Empire loyalists to the Royal family, they both steered America into fighting for the British Empire in both World Wars; this we shall see more of as we progress---in the FDR era, ferocious rent controls were imposed for years, ruining many thousands of smaller landlords and realty operators; after the smashing was deemed complete, the rent controls were rescinded, and into the hands of which families did the forfeited properties go? Why, to that Astors and several dozen other Pilgrims Society dynasties---

The friendship of Vincent Astor and Franklin Roosevelt had been generations in the making. The Astor, Roosevelt, and Delano families all had roots in New York dating back to colonial times. Furthermore there were strong family ties. Franklin Hughes Delano, whom FDR is named after, was married to an Astor and they were given an estate in the Hudson Valley as a wedding present. This marriage would prompt Vincent Astor's grandfather, William Backhouse Astor Jr., to establish Ferncliff in Rhinebeck so that he could visit his mother and breed horses. Decades later, on land which was part of the same estate, Eleanor Roosevelt would be raised by a descendant of the original settlers, the Livingstons, who had intermarried with both the Delano and Astor family.

The Livingstons need their own separate profile, as they indeed are the dynasty connected to the most other dynasties in this awesome Pilgrims Society spiderweb of British Crown loyalists--

Franklin D. Roosevelt's half-brother James "Rosy" Roosevelt Roosevelt, would be a close friend of Vincent Astor's father, John Jacob Astor IV and would even marry his sister, Vincent's aunt Helen. This union prompted John Jacob IV to name Vincent's Uncle Rosy an executor of the Astor Estate. The Astor Estate was one of America's great fortunes which had been established by America's first multi-millionaire and passed down for generations.

FDR's parents even rented an apartment from the Astors, who had made their fortune in New York real estate and were known as the "Land Lords of New York."

The generations long history of these families would be instrumental in forming the unique bond that would define the friendship of Vincent Astor and Franklin Roosevelt.

Vincent's father would later name the opulent Hotel St. Regis in Manhattan after the lake where Vincent would vacation with other prominent New Yorker's such as J.P. Morgan, President Theodore Roosevelt, and the Vanderbilts. In this closely knit society of American aristocracy, Astor and Roosevelt formed their personal identities and laid the foundation of a friendship that would unite the two for the rest of their lives.

As adults, the two childhood friends would continue the tradition of vacationing together. Astor would sail to Campobello, FDR's summer home in New Brunswick and President Roosevelt would take several long cruises aboard Astor's luxurious yacht Nourmahal.

“A NEARLY INCOMPREHENSIBLE FORTUNE”

The death of Vincent's father meant that the twenty year old Harvard freshman would inherit a nearly incomprehensible fortune in New York real-estate, business interests, and a large trust fund. Vincent's inheritance of the legendary Astor Estate, which had been established by the first multi-millionaire in America made him one of the wealthiest men alive and prompted the newspapers to dub him “The Boy Millionaire” and catapulted the already famous heir into the highest ranks of stardom.

Vincent Astor's Waldorf-Astoria Hotel

The Waldorf Astoria was the site of many secretive Meetings of The Pilgrims Society, plotting its Termite activities against our independence!

Henry Junior Taylor (1902-1984) was a director of the Waldorf Astoria Hotel and a member of The Pilgrims. He held interests in coal (Clinchfield Coal), banking (Chemical Bank) and the pulp and paper industry (Silicone Paper Company of America). He received the DuPont Award in 1949 and was a member of the National Institute of Social Sciences (eugenics), the globalist Foreign Policy Association and the bogus National Committee for Sound Fiscal Policy. He wrote articles for Reader's Digest, Saturday Evening Post, Life Magazine, Saturday Review of Literature, New York Times Sunday Magazine, "and economic journals in U.S., England, Switzerland, Sweden” (“Who’s Who In the East” 1957, page 900). He was Ambassador to Switzerland (1957-1961); his Who’s Who listing mentioned “The Pilgrims” and he was a director of the Economic Club of New York, opposed to monetary silver---

They also built Hotel Astor (one of the dining rooms) ---

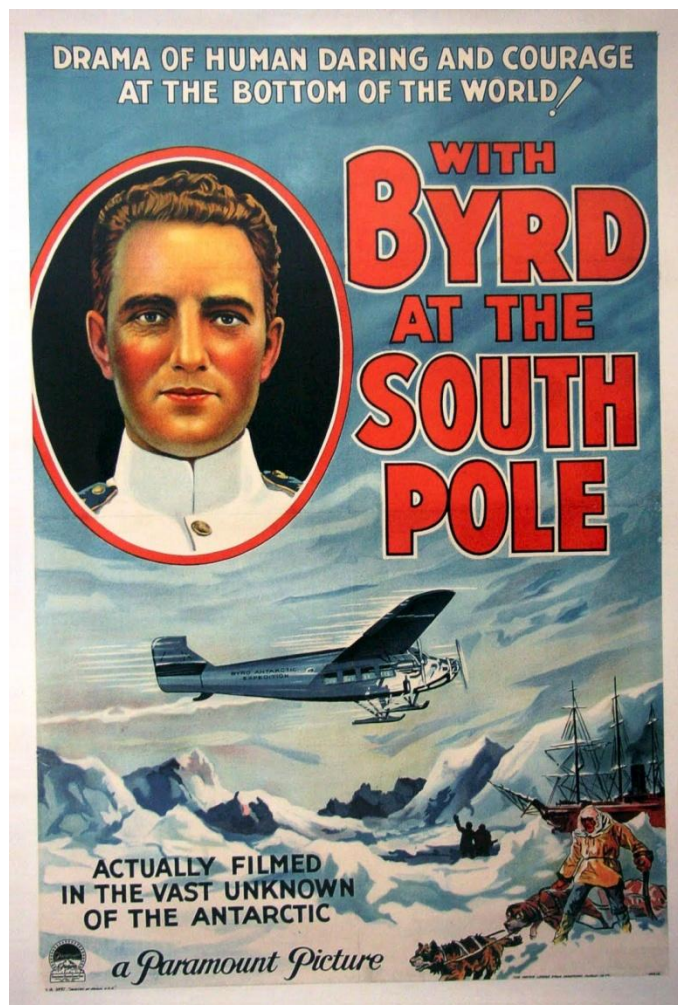

The connections between Vincent Astor and FDR were so close that FDR acted as an attorney for other Astor family members following the 1912 death of John Jacob Astor IV.

FDR was with Carter, Ledyard & Milburn; John G. Milburn (Pilgrims Society); President McKinley was taken to Milburn's house after being shot on September 5, 1901!

After the allies were victorious in the First World War, Vincent returned triumphantly to New York aboard U-117, a captured German submarine. He then resumed his duties as a wealthy businessman, managing a vast empire of real estate in Manhattan, founding journalistic publications like Today (which later merged with Newsweek), yachting, and attending social events with his beautiful wife Helen.

Astor and Roosevelt were both intimately involved with financing and supporting the Arctic and Antarctic expeditions of famed explorer Richard E. Byrd with whom both became quite friendly. During a 1929 expedition Byrd even named a mountain in Antarctica after Astor and later named a sea after Roosevelt.

Pilgrims Society members have financed many expeditions across the decades. These we should conclude are about discovery and exploitation of mineral resources. They are in fact interlocked with The Explorers Club in NYC. Between England, Australia and New Zealand ("Pilgrims Society") the majority claim over immense Antarctica is achieved; Chilean and Argentinean claims will always be brushed aside by the British (remember the Falklands War 1983!)

When Roosevelt fully returned to politics and ran for the Governorship of New York in 1928, Astor lent him his full support. Donating generously to Roosevelt's campaign, Astor broke from the traditional mold of wealthy multi-millionaires, particularly in Republican Dutchess County.

Astor didn't break from any mold! Pilgrims Society Members run both sides of major campaigns!

During Roosevelt's tenure as Governor of New York, Vincent and Helen Astor maintained a strong relationship with their neighbor. Both the Roosevelt's and Astor's had increasingly busy lives, but made every attempt to meet socially,

The 1932 presidential election propelled the friendship between Franklin and Vincent to new heights. During the tumultuous years of Roosevelt's Presidency, the two childhood pals would maintain a somewhat boyish friendship, complete with talks of pretty girls and late nights, while working closely together to address the crises of the Great Depression and The Second World War.

Astor and FDR did nothing to alleviate the Great Depression, caused by their English senior partners dumping hundreds of millions of silver ounces onto the world market, wrecking the value of silver and crippling USA export industries to the Far East, who could no longer afford our exports, idling millions of workers! As far as World War Two, I have no hesitancy to state that Astor and FDR were in on the British Empire plans to scheme and incite the war, same as they did the first Great War. After WWI these Pilgrims attempted to make the League of Nations a world government; after WW2 they tried to make the UN a world government, and are still trying!

In February 1933, shortly after promising a "New Deal" to the American people and winning the 1932 election, President Elect Roosevelt went on a cruise with his old friend aboard his palatial yacht Nourmahal. Built in 1928, the Nourmahal was one of the finest vessels afloat and genuinely appreciated by both lifelong yachtsmen. It was the largest private vessel built up to that time, it could sail around the world twice, carry supplies for an entire year, and was equipped with air conditioning, refrigeration, auto-pilot, and every state-of-the-art device it's owner could conceive of. With ten bedrooms, an 18 person dining room, a library, and a crew of nearly 50, the Nourmahal was easily the most luxurious yacht of the era.

FDR and Vincent Astor exiting the yacht---

FDR on Astor's 232 foot yacht---

Vincent had another yacht, the "Noma" which was 230.3 feet in length; he loaned it to the Navy in 1917.

While FDR and Astor were certainly friends, this cruise would also serve a political purpose; how could Roosevelt, who had promised a redistribution of wealth, truly pose a threat to America's richest individuals while vacationing with "The Landlord of New York" who was the archetype for inherited wealth? FDR would join Astor for five cruises aboard the Nourmahal, accompanied by close friends and relatives from New York society.

In February 1933 FDR went on a cruise with Astor on the yacht.

I believe there plans were finalized to have FDR strip Americans of gold soon after entering the White House--- Vincent Astor, Pilgrims Society member, looking like a Gangster from the old "Untouchables" TV series, but Boundlessly wealthier and infinitely more dangerous--- "Vincent was sullenly menacing"---

At Rhinebeck, New York, where Vincent Astor had a lavish estate, he had as a direct neighbor---Franklin Roosevelt! ("America's 60 Families," Lundberg, 1937, page 430). Same book, pages 342-343, shows Astor was a trustee of New York Hospital; other Pilgrims Society members were named as trustees; Lundberg never heard of the group; didn't realize its importance; or agreed to be silent on it as a condition of being published!

Aboard the Nourmahal, the hard drinking, adventurous, ardent republican Kermit Roosevelt and his fifth cousin Franklin were able to mend the rift that had opened between the Democratic and Republican branches of the Roosevelt family due to their mutual friend, Vincent Astor. FDR had been a focal point of this family schism due to his support of Al Smith over Teddy Roosevelt Jr. in the 1924 N.Y. Gubernatorial election. President Teddy Roosevelt's children had famously told the newspapers that they wouldn't vote for FDR as President and would continue to support the Republican party. Kermit became a regular guest of FDR's at the White House and remained very close with Vincent Astor.

Undaunted, Roosevelt, Astor, and the "Nourmahal Gang" would continue to regularly vacation on the yacht. Other cruises included notable events such as hosting a luncheon for King George's youngest brother the Duke of Kent and his wife, FDR performing Easter morning religious services aboard the ship, the first time that the Presidential flag was flown over a civilian vessel, as well as intense family poker games when FDR's sons Elliott and James would come aboard. Franklin's eldest son James later recounted that the Nourmahal would be the site of the only time that he ever saw his father lose his temper in front of anyone outside of the immediate family. This speaks to Roosevelt's comfort aboard the ship and his closeness with Astor.

Vincent Astor and Kermit Roosevelt would later combine their vacations with national service. The two friends would sail the Pacific in 1938 on an intelligence gathering cruise with the consent of FDR and the Office of Naval Intelligence. Their mission: To obtain information concerning the Japanese mandated Marshall Islands and investigate rumors of Japanese fortifications throughout the Pacific. No better cover for an investigative cruise could be found than one that saw the wealthy Commodore of the New York Yacht Club sailing his personal yacht across the ocean for months. Despite the Nourmahal being barred from entering the Marshall Islands by the Imperial Japanese Navy, Astor and Kermit did meet with members of British Intelligence, who provided them with some useful insights, notably that the Japanese had not fortified the islands. The Nourmahal's state-of-the-art radar direction finder, also provided more specific information on Japan's military deployment.

Their friendship and familial ties, remained prominent in their private lives. FDR along with Eleanor Roosevelt continued to meet socially with Vincent and Helen Astor, and after Astor's 1940 divorce with Astor's second wife and James Roosevelt's sister-in-law Mary "Minnie" Cushing Astor. They exchanged Christmas gifts and despite the incredibly demanding duties of both Vincent and Franklin they made every attempt to see each other.

It was in Rhinebeck that Astor would go to escape his busy life as a businessman, where he had an entire building devoted to entertainment with squash courts, indoor and outdoor tennis courts, the pool which FDR made use of, and a private miniature railroad. Helen Astor and later Vincent's second wife Mary would also maintain friendly relationships with both Franklin and Eleanor. Helen was known to lunch with FDR at the White House and following a 1934 vacation to Germany, she met with Roosevelt to discuss her observations of Nazi Germany in the early years of Hitler's dictatorship. Both families wrote each other concerning patronage for their friends during the Great Depression. Helen served with the Warm Springs Foundation and Vincent even provided shops for Eleanor's Val-Kill Industries. During the 1939 Royal visit of the King and Queen of England, FDR offered the use of Ferncliff to members of the royal entourage.

Vincent Astor worked with British and USA
Intelligence in both World Wars---

It was Vincent Astor and The Room, not any of America's official intelligence agencies that made contact with the British Passport Control Office, which was the cover for Britain's spies in the Western Hemisphere. Contacting foreign agents and leaking privileged information was almost certainly illegal and at the very least immoral, but the mighty captains of industry and business in New York had little worry of any potential consequences that may come from their actions.

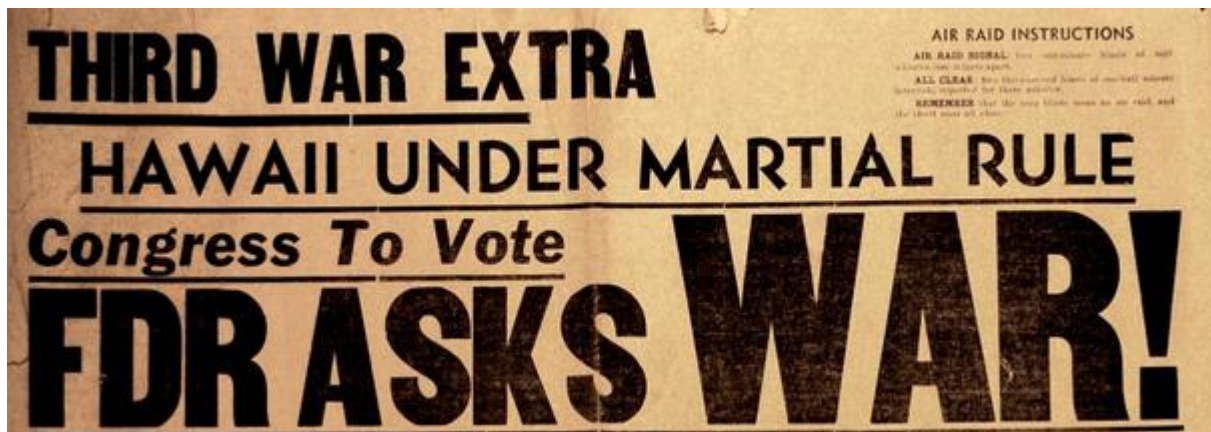

“INCREDIBLY WELL CONNECTED INTERNATIONAL BUSINESSMAN”

Astor's status as an incredibly well-connected international businessman provided him with access to information that no one else could attain. As Germany rearmed, the Japanese Empire expanded and the world was once again on the brink of war, Astor and his cohorts would be instrumental in keeping FDR apprised of world events with insider information. Throughout the 1930s, the Roosevelt administration was restricted in their ability to prepare for an upcoming conflict by an ardently neutral public and a series of neutrality laws. Astor's informal espionage ring offered a means for the President to circumvent these restrictions.

“The Final Secret of Pearl Harbor” published in 1954, shows that FDR ordered the USA Pacific Fleet at Pearl Harbor in Hawaii to be on “off alert” status to give him excuse to drag America into World War Two for the benefit of his “Pilgrim Partners.”

The two finest examples of Astor leveraging his business connections for intelligence activities came through his prominent role in Chase National Bank and Western Union Telegraph Company. Chase gave Astor, and thus Roosevelt, access to the financial activities of the AMTORG Corporation, which was a front for the Soviet Government. Working closely with the British, Astor used his connections in telecommunications and his Bermuda estate to illegally access diplomatic messages being sent between the Western Hemisphere and Europe. These messages included correspondence from South American governments to their European embassies and official communications from European nations to their envoys in the Western Hemisphere.

Silver ingots delivered to vault at Chase National Bank---

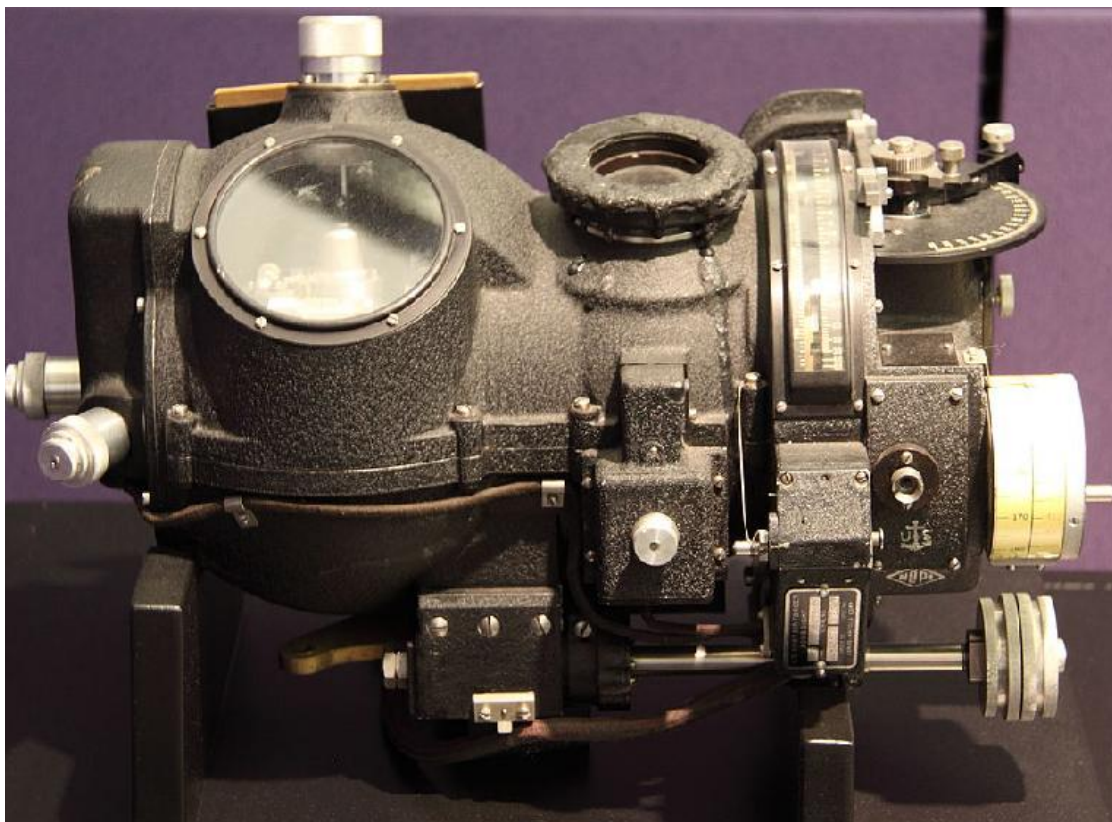

The New York Times, April 25, 1934, page 4, brazenly contradicted itself first by saying "Banks have no interest in the price of silver" and in the same story stating "The Chase

National Bank has had important relationships with the silver markets in many countries, including the Far East.”

Astor was involved in National Security matters outside of The Room as well. In May of 1940, he was instrumental in the attempt to protect “The most confidential military instrument now under development that this country has” the Norden Bombsight. This device promised to greatly increase the accuracy of U.S. bombers during the war. In the days before the Manhattan Project, it was considered America’s secret weapon. It would allow flight crews to deliver their payload accurately even when bombing “blind” at night. The boast among the Army Air Corps was that Norden’s device allowed them to drop a bomb onto a pickle barrel.

Norden Bombsight---

Astor's role as Area Controller was, in essence, a prototype for America's modern intelligence apparatus. The uniqueness of this position, coupled with Astor's lack of formal intelligence experience would continue to fuel the rivalry between Astor, Donovan, and the nation's other civilian and military intelligence agencies. Astor, still technically an inactive member of the Naval Reserve, would act as the Chairman of the Board for American intelligence in New York. He would no longer go on spy missions personally, but would coordinate and streamline the activities of thousands of individuals regardless of which agency they worked for. This position put Astor in charge of coordinating the efforts of the FBI, U.S. Navy, U.S. Army, and the State Department.

To Roosevelt, few could be trusted like his old friend and fewer still had the administrative expertise and personality to manage such a large undertaking. It was no easy task to coordinate the strong personalities leading each of these federal fiefdoms but Astor would make the most of his unique position. He would help identify Nazi agents, act as a clearing house for all intelligence in the city through which the majority of Lend-Lease aid passed through on it's way to England, make significant contributions to the defense of the Eastern seaboard and even provided a residence in the St. Regis Hotel to the head of British Intelligence in the U.S.

Besides these Pilgrims planning World War One (Review of Reviews, May 1902, pp 554-557) at the Treaty of Versailles in 1919 they intentionally made World War Two unavoidable because they WANTED another big war!

Of 440 Treaty clauses, 419 were punishments against Germany; Henry White USA (Pilgrims) and Lord Curzon England (Pilgrims) drove Germany to desperation to force it to accept a militaristic dictator. As Curzon infamously said, “It is not a peace treaty, but a break in hostilities,” as soon as another generation of Germans grew up, the war broke out exactly as planned by The Pilgrims Society. Astor’s pal FDR acted to draw us into the war for the British Empire by having the Pacific fleet asleep at Pearl Harbor. “The Pilgrims of Great Britain” (2002, short run book) page 188 shows The Pilgrims London met on April 12, 1917 “To Mark The Entry of the United States Into The War.”

Vincent Astor, the Land-Lord of New York, was appointed by FDR to Coordinate all Intelligence Activity in the City just prior to America's entry into World War II.

Astor put into motion plans that he and FDR had discussed since the end of the First World War. January 26, of 1942 saw one of Astor's most famous ideas come to fruition. The "Ships Observer's Scheme" equipped civilian vessels and fishing ships with radio equipment to report sightings of Nazi submarines. The most famous of these ships was Ernest Hemmingway's 38 foot yacht Pilar, which patrolled the Caribbean for U-boats. The advanced warning provided by these lookouts would help keep naval commanders appraised of the situation in the Atlantic theater and allow them to steer allied vessels clear of danger.

The loss of his lifelong friend pushed Astor further from society as he became increasingly anti-social. In 1953, Vincent and Minnie Cushing would be divorced, but not until Minnie had found a suitable replacement as a wife for the difficult, ill, and aging millionaire. Vincent's personality became a major point of contention for potential matches despite Astor's claim that he would not likely live longer than three years. One potential suitor reportedly claimed "I don't even like you" to which Astor informed her of his ill health and imminent demise which elicited the response of "But what if you don't die?" and a refusal to marry. The seriousness of this issue is only heightened when one realizes that a 1957 survey from Fortune magazine estimated Astor's wealth between $100 and $200 million dollars, a tremendous increase from the fortune he inherited in 1912.

The old rich long since realized they must lowball
Their wealth to reduce public scrutiny!

At the age of 61, the ailing Vincent Astor would wed the once divorced and recently widowed Roberta Brooke Russell Marshall, who later claimed that in six years of marriage the couple only went out a handful of times. Brooke would further renovate Astor Courts, removing the squash courts and installing a library near the pool, though at his advanced age and in increasingly poor health Vincent was far less likely to make use of the athletic facilities of the home. During Vincent's final marriage, the couple would move between four homes, but each one was typically barred from visitors as the suspicious and depressed Vincent even forbade Brooke from maintaining a relationship with her son from an earlier marriage. In the final years of his life, Vincent, who continued to excessively drink and smoke, would see a near constant parade of doctors as his chronically poor health lead to a fatal heart attack in his Manhattan apartment on February 3, 1959.

In the early 1930s Vincent Astor had a mansion built in Bermuda which had “a narrow gauge track for 800 feet in 1938 and later added another 600 feet. The train had two passenger cars each having seats for four, and two luggage cars. The train was used to take his guests around the sprawling estate and over the hill to his private station where he connected his tracks with that of Bermuda's Main Railway. This junction point was known as the Astor's Siding where his guests could easily transfer between Bermuda Railway train and his own. “

He built a similar transport at Ferncliff Mansion New York. Vincent Astor was a major investor in MGM's 1925 silent classic "Ben Hur" costing around $6 million, the costliest silent film ever made. The 1959 epic "Ben Hur" with Charlton Heston was the second such movie!

He was an executive committee member of the Association of the Bar of the City of New York and chaired the Committee on Corporate Law of the New York State Bar Association. He became a trustee of St. Paul's School and Cold Spring Harbor Laboratory. Surprisingly, at the site linked we read---

"Bill was a member of the Pilgrim Society, the Piping Rock Club, and the Links Club in New York. He was an avid sailor and longtime member of the Edgartown Yacht Club."

Here was one of the projects the W.W. Astor Foundation funded; showing an interest in silver mining in Mexico---

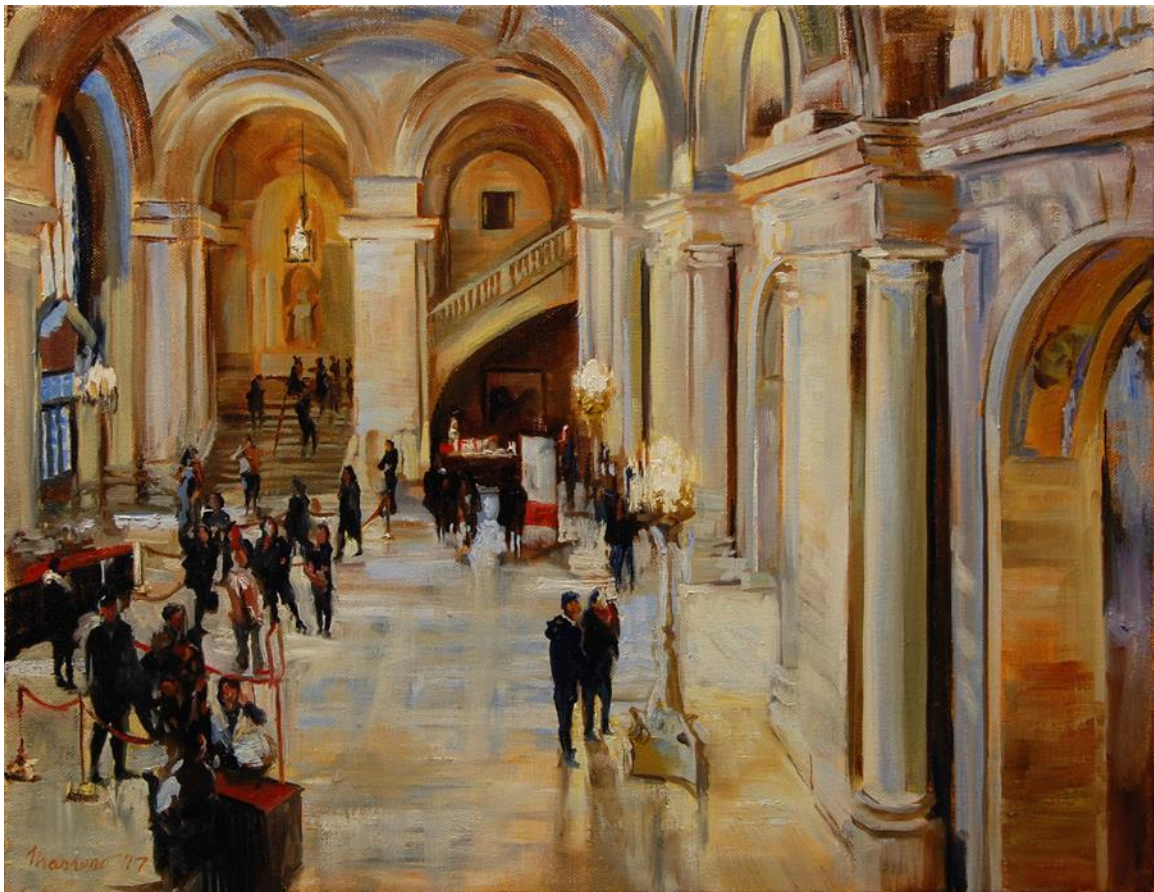

Page X of foreword to states "Silver Mining and Society in Colonial Mexico, Zacatecas 1546-1700" (1971, 294 pages) ---

Part of the research for this study was carried out with the aid of a generous grant from the William Waldorf Astor Foundation, which altogether resolved financial difficulties.

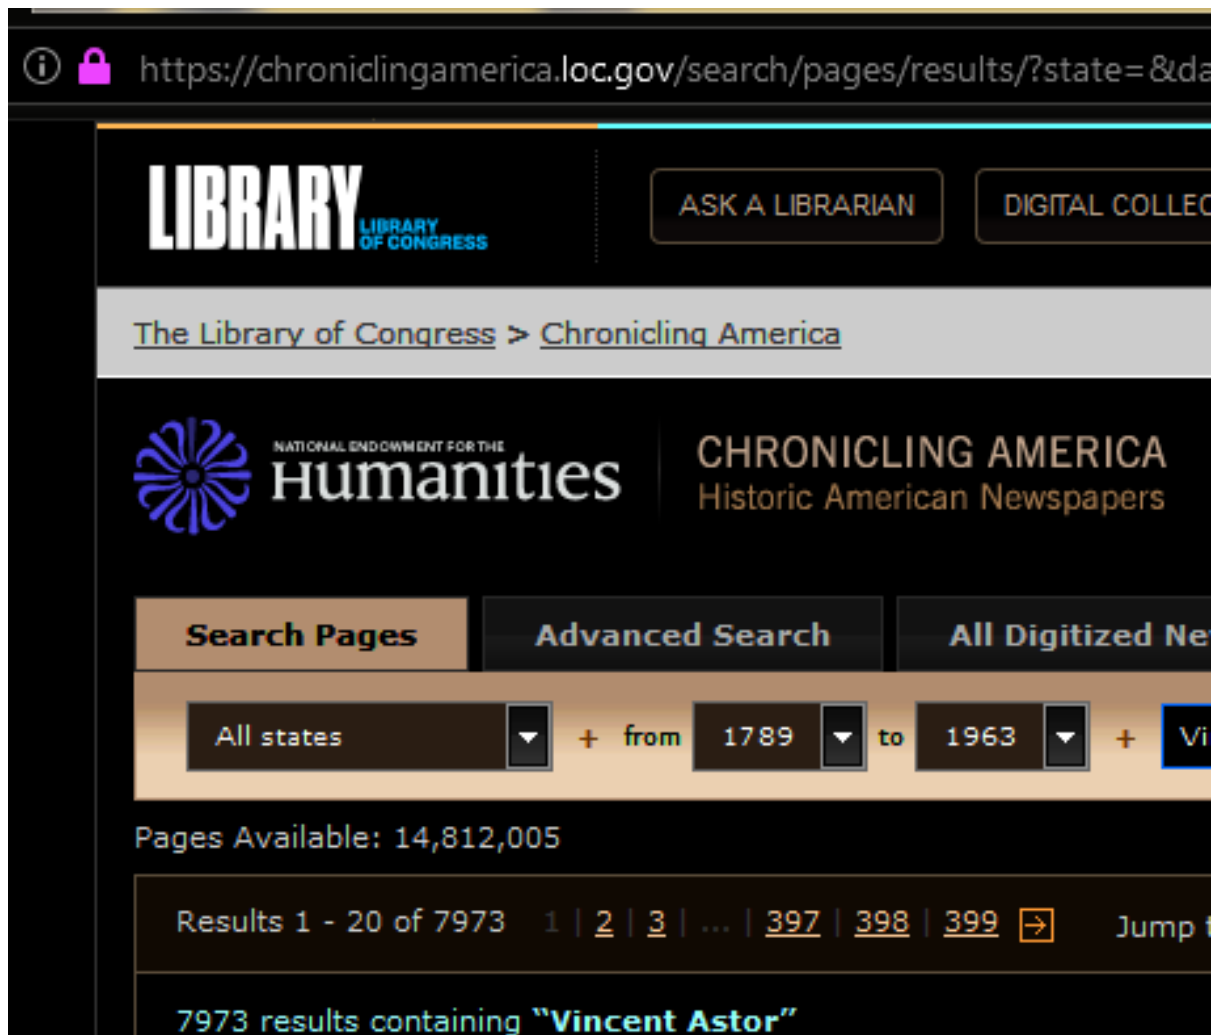

Somewhat surprisingly, I can't show Vincent Astor was a member of The Pilgrims past the 1940 roster; 1945, 1948, 1949, 1954 and 1957 don't show him. Vincent developed a booze habit. The 1948-1949 "Who's Who in America," page 90, showed Vincent on no corporate boards, and he still had a booze habit (second reference). By 1954 his half brother John Jacob Astor VI, often just called John Astor, was listed. Vincent and John weren't on the best of terms. Regardless the American Astor family branch had to maintain Pilgrims Society representation. At some undetermined point, the English branch of the Astors became the main branch as we shall see. That may have been at the latest by the mid 1940s. Year 2002 is the final year I can document an Astor (Brooke Astor) was a member of The Pilgrims USA; she may have been in their lists up till 2008 when she'd have been in the necrology for 2006-2007. However, there appears to be an unstated rule that members withdraw when their health becomes too poor so more active people can take their slots; however, many are members till death, probably over half of them. Astor Hall in New York City Public Library---

Think Vincent Astor wasn't a big wheel? ---

VINCENT ASTOR'S HALF BROTHER ALSO BECAME A PILGRIMS MEMBER

John Jacob Astor VI, usually known as John Astor, was somewhat disgruntled half brother of Vincent Astor; John Astor was the father of Pilgrims Society member Jacqueline "Jackie" Astor Drexel (born 1949; see first image at start of this investigation)

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/John_Jacob_Astor_VI John was born in 1912 at 840 Fifth Avenue in the very large Astor mansion built by his father. John R. Drexel III and John Astor both appear in The Pilgrims NYC 1974. Drexel III was father of John R. Drexel IV, Pilgrims Society, married to Jacqueline Astor (Pilgrims Society), daughter of John Astor (below) and this Astor/Drexel union is the focal point of this investigation; they have huge backgrounds! In his earlier days J.J. Astor VI was an exec in International Mercantile Marine, the interest that owned the Titanic on which his father went down---he's also the maternal grandfather, via Jacqueline Astor Drexel, of Nicholas Astor Drexel (1988---) ---

In May 1934 John Jacob Astor VI returned from a trip to Shanghai China. What was he doing there? Instinct for these Pilgrims operators tells me it had to do with the beginning of very large movements of silver out of China; destination, the vaults of the “Pilgrimized” United States Treasury Department; which movements were caused primarily by the Silver Purchase Act of June 1934.

His parents, John Jacob Astor IV and his 2nd wife, Madeleine Talmage Force---

John Jacob Astor VI (1912-1992) was engaged to the daughter of Lawrence L. Gillespie (Pilgrims 1908) a wealthy banker with a mansion in Newport Rhode Island and an official of the American Bankers Association; however the engagement was cancelled.

GILLESPIE, LAWRENCE L.

When J.J. Astor VI's mother Madeleine Talmadge Force Astor died in 1940, she left among many other valuable possessions a diamond ring estimated to be worth $890,000 in 2018 dollars.

On September 18, 1944, in New York City, he married for the second time to Gertrude Gretsches (1923–1999), the daughter of Walter and Gertrude Gretsches. Their marriage ended in divorce on August 2, 1954. Before their separation and divorce, the couple had a daughter: Mary Jacqueline “Jackie” Astor (1949---) who in 1984 married John Rozet Drexel IV (1945---), son of John Rozet Drexel III (1919-2007) and Mildred Sophia Noreen Stonor (1922-2012). John R. Drexel IV is great, great, great grandson of banker Anthony Joseph Drexel and a grandson of Ralph Stonor, 5th Baron Camoys. Jacqueline Astor Drexel and husband John R. Drexel IV are the first people shown at the start of this investigation; you can see how immense their histories are! Walter Gretsches owned New York Band Instrument Company which was the biggest such dealer in four states and operated across America and Canada.

Hoyt Ammidon (1909-1988) was CEO for Vincent Astor's interests, including United States Trust Company of New York at 45 Wall Street. Ammidon was a member of the Society of Mayflower Descendants and was on such boards as Perkin-Elmer Corporation; New York Airways; Fidelity & Casualty of New York; Vertientes Camaguey Sugar Company (Caribbean); Greenwich Savings Bank; Nourmahal Northwest (named after a yacht Vincent Astor owned); Great Northern Paper Company; General American Transportation; American Express; Yorkshire Insurance; Seaboard Fire & Marine Insurance; Continental Insurance; Niagara Fire Insurance; Fidelity Phoenix Insurance; Pacific General Development; Dividend Shares; Monthly Income Shares; Fireman's Fund Insurance; Bullock Fund; Carriers & General Corporation; WestAm Properties; Nationwide Securities; etc. (source, "Who's Who" volumes 1960-1981) --- Hoyt Ammidon Jr. shows in The Pilgrims 1990; (1957 roster) ---

He was dubbed the "Titanic Baby" for his affiliation with the RMS Titanic; Astor was born four months after his father, Colonel John Jacob Astor IV, died in the sinking of the Titanic; his mother Madeleine Astor survived the sinking. Astor was known for his legal battles with the estate of his elder half-brother, Vincent Astor, to inherit a larger portion of their father's $85 million fortune. He was also known for his many engagements and four marriages to prominent society women. Astor died in Miami Beach, Florida, in 1992 at the age of 79. His body was returned to New York for burial with his parents in the Trinity Church Cemetery. At the time of his death, he was survived by his son, daughter, three grandsons, and younger half-brother.”

Ellen T. French (1915-1974;) a cousin of the Vanderbilts (Pilgrims Society) married (below) John Astor (1912-1992) in 1934 at Trinity Episcopal Church (the one in Newport, Rhode Island) and they had a son, William Backhouse Astor III (1935-2008). William married Charlotte Fisk in 1956 (possible descendant of “Diamond Jim” Fisk who was assassinated in 1872 by a victim of his swindles and gold ripoffs with the bigger character Jay Gould whose son Edwin became a Pilgrims Society member). John and Ellen’s son, William Backhouse Astor III (1935-2008, committed suicide). Maybe because the Royals didn’t admit him into The Pilgrims Society? However, I have no lists for 2003 to 2013, but scanty info from “Who’s Who” volumes. I haven’t found John Astor (1912-1992) in any “Who’s Who.” People can decline to be listed. Very likely there’s genealogical linkage between Ellen T. French and John French III and Bertram French (Pilgrims 2014).

John Astor (1912-1992) was in The Pilgrims lists for 1978 and 1980; Mrs. Vincent Astor, widow of Vincent Astor, first appeared in the 1980 USA roster (the 1979 I lack). Before having a look at the English Astors we need to get overview of Brooke Astor (1902-2007, lived to be 105). Brooke Astor once had a party for United Nations Secretary General Kofi Annan, another of many signals the Astors are very globalist. We read---

“Manhattan's high society had been defined two generations earlier by Vincent Astor's grandmother, who established the circle's limit at 400 since that was the most she could fit in her ballroom. Brooke Astor was more inclusive, and over the years drew together world leaders, arts patrons and artists, social and cultural figures and anyone else that she thought would make for an interesting evening.”

The Los Angeles Times, August 14, 2007 said of Brooke Astor “her dinner parties were known for drawing together the power brokers of politics and business.”

David Rockefeller, Pilgrims Society & Brooke Astor, Pilgrims Society, were closely associated in wealth seizure and globalism; she inherited the membership slot in The Pilgrims

Brooke Astor was a lifetime trustee of Rockefeller University! The Pierpont Morgan Library was a natural for her to be associated with, a nest of Pilgrims Society members. The Order of Saint John of Jerusalem is an English organizations composed mainly of Anglicans and Episcopalians, and a very noteworthy interlock for The Pilgrims Society. The Order was chartered in 1888 by Queen Victoria, a Protestant Anglican. Today it has some 35,000 members in various countries and is therefore, by numbers, about half as elite as the Order of the British Empire (OBE); these two have a heavy interlock; top members of both groups are always members of the apex Society, The Pilgrims. The Order of Saint John of Jerusalem should not be mixed up with any similar Vatican sponsored group; both trace to the old

Crusades in the Middle East which were largely about looting gold, silver and precious stones---

Finally near the end she stated "Pilgrims U.S.," not that any average reader of these thousands of listings would have any club as to its super ultra distinction. All those clubs she listed have strong Pilgrims interlock. The Guardian, London, August 15, 2007, remarked---

"Brooke Astor always maintained a liberal political outlook, and was given an award by President Clinton."

A flashback---James Bruce (1892-1980; see below) was a wealthy Maryland tycoon and member of The Pilgrims Society. His family in fact traced all the way back to the famous Robert the Bruce of Scotland, whose family later dealt opium in China! The "Who's Who" in America (1960-1961), page 387 showed Bruce was---yes! An Episcopalian! He was on such boards as Revlon; Republic Steel; American Airlines; AVCO Manufacturing; Commercial Credit Company; Fruehauf Trailer Company;

Congoleum Corporation; Technicolor Incorporated; Western Tablet & Stationary; General American Investors; United States Industries; Continental Insurance; Klein Department Stores. James was also president of Baltimore Trust Company and a director of National Dairy Products Corporation. He was Ambassador to Argentina (1947-1949). Bruce's younger brother David (1898-1977) became a Pilgrims vice president in the 1960s and married into the Mellon family (probably wealthier than the Astors and Drexels combined!) David Bruce, also Episcopalian was undersecretary of State; Ambassador to France (1949-1952); West Germany (1957-1959); United Kingdom (1961-1968); Liaison to People's Republic of China (1973-1974) and Ambassador to North Atlantic Treaty Organization (1974-1976). These are the type of power people ("POWER PILGRIMS") the Astors associated with; naturally shoe shine stand operators wouldn't be in their league.

One evening in 1953, Minnie and Vincent Astor went to a dinner party at the Manhattan apartment of Mr. and Mrs. James Bruce. There were sixteen at two tables of eight, and seated directly across from Vincent was a very attractive, recently widowed woman of fifty named Brooke Marshall. Vincent had known Mrs. Marshall casually for years. Coincidentally, her late husband had been married to Helen Astor's sister before he married Mrs. Marshall.

Minnie Cushing married Vincent Astor in 1940; they were divorced in 1953; afterwards Vincent married Brooke Marshall. Cushing's father is remembered as "the father of neurosurgery." One of Minnie's sister's married William Paley, leading to Paley's later acquaintance (see previous) with Brooke Astor.

On October 8, 1953, only days after Minnie got an Idaho divorce, Mrs. Marshall became Brooke Astor at a ceremony at the Bar Harbor home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Pulitzer. Vincent's mother, Lady Ribblesdale (age 85) was in attendance.

Brooke Astor (1902-2007) ---

Her third husband was Vincent Astor, who inherited great wealth when his father died aboard the Titanic in 1912. He owned Newsweek, the Hotel St. Regis, and many millions in real estate, as well as vast holdings in the automobile, shipping, and air transportation industries. The family's ancestry -- and fortune -- traces back to John Jacob Astor, America's richest man by his death in 1848, who accumulated his millions trading fur, tea and real estate. The family name is reflected in Manhattan's Astor Place, the Waldorf-Astoria, etc.

“Astor was born Roberta Brooke Russell on March 30, 1902, in Portsmouth, N.H., where her father, a Marine, was stationed. An only child, she was reared mostly overseas -- China, Panama, Santo Domingo and Hawaii -- as her father moved from posting to posting (he eventually served as high commissioner to Haiti and was the Marine Corps commandant from 1932-34). Astor attended a series of schools in a number of countries, experiences that gave her an unusually broad exposure to the world.”

Anthony Dryden Marshall (1924-2014), whose father was an earlier husband of Roberta Brooke Russell Marshall Astor (Vincent was her last husband; no children), obviously making Anthony Marshall Vincent Astor's stepson. They weren't on best terms. Since the Astors were dominant powers in United States Trust Company of New York at number 45 Wall Street, Anthony Marshall was "situated" there for part of the 1980s. The top CEO of U.S. Trust was always a member of The Pilgrims, Hoyt Ammidon and later Tom Killefer, who was also a perverse Rhodes Scholar---

According to this link, Vincent Astor's first wife and the first wife of Brooke's second husband---were sisters. These genealogies are a bit sickening as well as complex, but completely predictable.

“Marshall was the U.S. consul in Istanbul, Turkey (1958–1959), then during the Nixon administration, served as the U.S. ambassador to the Malagasy Republic (1969–1971). Later he served as ambassador to Trinidad and Tobago (1972–74) and Kenya (1973); as well as during the Ford administration, to the Seychelles (1976). He was also appointed special assistant to Richard Mervin Bissell Jr. to oversee the development of the U-2 reconnaissance aircraft. In the 1980s, Marshall was an officer with United States Trust Company of New York, where he assisted the bank with the management of large estate accounts.”

The Malagasy Republic is since renamed Madagascar. Large estate accounts yes, Pilgrims Society families connected to other Pilgrims Society families by many marriages. Marshall was also with the Central Intelligence Agency for several years. That didn't save him from taking a fall. The CIA is not the "invisible government," it like thousands of other entities is a mere tentacle of The Pilgrims Society, albeit one of the most important ones.

Anthony Marshall at left, looking like a typical Pilgrims Society pirate, with his biological mother, Brooke Astor, late in her life (deceased 2007). Marshall eventually started ripping her off and as he wasn't an actual Astor, he eventually got indicted, arrested, and penalized; he wasn't stopped till he hit the \$60 million mark. However, in no court action nor in any media report on that situation was any whisper made about his having been a Pilgrims Society member, nor about his mother having been (more of a member than he was) nor about Vincent Astor having been a member for most of his adult life. On her death in 2007 her fortune was outrageously lowballed as a paltry \$192 million, which was as much as The Society felt the public was "mature enough to know about" IMHO. In 2002 Anthony Marshall peddled an artwork owned by his mother for $10 million. The artwork she had pledged to the Metropolitan Museum of Art, of which he was a former trustee. Clearly Marshall was at no time very close to The Pilgrims inner circle and at some point they must have deemed to have made an error admitting him. In 2009 Marshall was convicted of grand larceny. Appeals kept him out of lock up till 2013 and then he was out on medical parole. He croaked in late 2014. That's about enough on that spoiled brat, now a corpse. We want to have a look at one more Astor relative in America before we have a glance at the now much more important English Astor family branch.

A LOOK AT THE ENGLISH ASTORS!

William Waldorf Astor (March 31, 1848 to October 18, 1919) was the son of John Jacob Astor III (1822-1890) and Charlotte Augusta Gibbes Astor (1825-1887, buried at Trinity Episcopal Church cemetery NYC). W.W. was their only child. She descended from Robert Gibbes, who was Chief Justice of South Carolina Colony (1698) and became Governor of South Carolina 1710-1712; he was a large colonial landowner. In 1877 he was elected to the New York State Assembly and in 1879 became a New York State Senator as a Republican. During 1882 to 1885 W.W. Astor was United States Minister to Italy, having been appointed by President Chester A. Arthur. As noted previously, William Waldorf Astor after permanently relocating to England in 1891 still had over 100,000 people in Manhattan paying him rent; very likely a severe extreme lowball statistic. He became a British subject in 1899. His daughter Gwendolyn (1889-1902) was buried in Trinity Episcopal Church New York cemetery. Not surprisingly, the Astors did real estate deals with the equally formidable Grosvenors (Pilgrims Society) and the Winthrops (Pilgrims Society) and other such Pilgrims dynasties. In 1916 he received the Royal title Baron Astor and in 1917 was created a

VISCOUNT in return for donating large sums to the British war effort in WW One. This shows the snob arrogance of English upper crust. He married Mary Dahlgren Paul (1853-1894). Her father James William Paul Senior was described as “a prominent Philadelphia lawyer” (other sources show different birth years for her; not important). J.W. Paul Sr. founded the Union League Club of Philadelphia in 1862. William Waldorf Astor---surprisingly, I haven’t found him in early Pilgrims rosters (1903 is incomplete; 1907, 1914, 1919; not! However as we shall see, the Astors made it into the organization much earlier than the also financially potent Drexels; I will speculate as to why) ---

THE OBSERVER

We're still with William Waldorf Astor (1848-1919) described as “one of the world’s most enigmatic tycoons” and several items must be mentioned; his son Waldorf Astor (1879-1952) was chairman of the Royal Institute of International Affairs in London (1939-1949, counterpart to our CFR in NYC); W.W. Astor senior owned Cliveden, a splendid estate mansion in Buckinghamshire and the ancient Hever Castle in Kent. Furthermore, he had a lavish office built in London known as Two Temple Place---

“Astor had no hesitation in handing the architect an unlimited budget for Two Temple Place and clearly had a great deal of influence in it’s planning; the result of which is something so personal to him that it reads almost like his own autobiography. By all accounts he was a shy and austere man with a secretive nature and prickly personality; reflected in the building’s imposing façade, formidable gargoyles and strong room. Whilst the opulent interior with wood paneling and intricate carving is a vivid reflection of Astor's deepest passions and interests: history, literature and the arts."

Cliveden means "valley among cliffs" in old English. W.W. Astor bought the mansion in 1893 and "made sweeping alterations to the gardens and the interior of the house." The present Cliveden mansion stands on a site that had an earlier and less elaborate structure built in 1666 for the second Duke of Buckingham. The land before that was owned by Geoffrey De Cliveden as of AD 1237. In 1851 the second Duke of Sutherland had the mansion reconstructed. Herewith some images of the 47 room mansion near the Thames River inherited by William Waldorf Astor II and his wife, Nancy WITCHER Langhorne Astor, in 1919 on the passing of W.W. Astor---"over the years Cliveden has played host to some of the world's most powerful people" -

The 1929 Crash did NOT cause the Great Depression! The Astors Were silver suppressors via their big stake in the second United States Bank (1816-1836!)

Astor V became chairman of the Empire Press Union which was founded in 1909 (page 214, "Pilgrims and Pioneers" 1946, rare book by Sir Harry Brittain, an organizer of The Pilgrims Society). W.W. Astor II was very prominent in the Imperial Press Conferences held in various nations of the British EMPIRE. The fifth Imperial Press Conference was held in 1935 in South Africa, over which he presided; this source contains no less than forty (40) references to him. J.J. Astor V was also chairman of The Times (London) newspaper; Lady Violet Astor was his wife. The Astors owned The Times of London from 1922 to 1967 when it was sold to Lord Thomson of Fleet (Pilgrims Society). Astor V and his wife Violet were pals with King George V of England, sponsor of The Pilgrims Society (page 228; page 246 mentions Astor having a large object “made from Australian gold.”) Astor V owned Hever Castle, named for William De Hever in the 1200s; it was visited by King Henry VIII, most forceful of the English monarchs who defeated the Pope for religious hegemony over England.

Page 16 of this book has her addressing a meeting of the English Speaking Union in New York; page 89 has her back in England---

IT WAS very kind of the English Speaking Union and the League of Nations Union American Committee to have thought of giving me this welcome. It was particularly appropriate that they should have asked the First Lord of the Admiralty to preside, and gracious of him to come.

Page 95 has Astor rattling away on globalism---

Everywhere I went in America I spoke of the League of Nations. Everywhere I found hundreds and thousands of people eager to help along a league of peace. Much in this league of nations has been misunderstood and misrepresented in America.

The ESU, English Speaking Union is a Pilgrims Society front working to make English the language of the world government. Notice her support for the League of Nations, England's first big attempt at world government. The Astors are exceptionally globalist! A flashback to pages 61-62 has Astor yammering for covert British world domination---

Don't forget also that the Irish, under the treaty recently made by Great Britain, can be represented in the League of Nations. But it can never be a real League until all nations are in.
So I appeal to all real citizens of my native country to urge upon this, the greatest federation of states the

Let us give all less fortunate countries a chance. Let us be tender to all who suffer. Let our help go out to them in their need. The world needs the Anglo-Saxon ideals now. Don't be afraid of joining a league of peace. Be afraid not to join.

perfectly well that it is not true, and politicians, like people, who are not telling the truth, are playing a losing game. I don't say that they will lose at once, but lose they will.

Life Magazine, January 6, 1941, page 2, very surprisingly published a letter criticizing the bloodthirsty warmongering Lady Astor---the Astors in America and their English relatives were both working to drag America into another British sponsored military conflict---

Longing for War

Sirs:

In the Dec. 16 issue of LIFE, Lady Astor is quoted as saying: "Thousands of young Americans are longing to get into this war. It is right that they should." Who does she think she is? After all, is she a young American? In all our contacts we have found no American youth who is sympathetic with the view put forward by Lady Astor.

Considering that Life Magazine was/is a Pilgrims Society mouthpiece and it propagandized, like so many newspapers, magazines and radio stations of that time owned by Pilgrims Society members and which received advertising revenues from many Pilgrims Society owned industries, for United States entry into World War Two, it's a miracle this letter of complaint got published. One of the writers was someone named Cuthbert; that too is remarkable because Cuthbert sounds British as hell. Father in law of above was the 4th Earl of Minto who was British Governor General over Canada (1898-1904) and then British Governor General and Viceroy of India (1905-1910) and was suppressing silver there. Pilgrims rosters from 1902 (incomplete), 1907 and 1914 don't show the Earl; however, regardless that "base" is covered, as the Earl was a member of the Order of the Garter, strictly limited at any time to a maximum total of 26 elitists around the Royal family; yes, in some sense the Order of the Garter is more important than The Pilgrims; however not really, since The Pilgrims encompasses so many other ultra powerful souls. The Order of the Garter, sometimes called Knights of the Garter, was founded in AD 1348 by King Edward III; 2014 must have been a happy year for its members, being the 666th anniversary of its founding. The 4th Earl of Minto, father in law of J.J. Astor, Lord Astor of Hever Castle---he came of a fantastic line naturally including opium dealing; one figure in his genealogy was the final colonial Governor of New York---

The author below worked first for Lord Astor (Pilgrims London) starting in 1964 then for Lord Thomson of Fleet (Pilgrims London) ---author did a hatchet job on the Hunt brothers and silver, ridiculing the idea of having silver serve as money again--
-naturally the book features no faint whisper about The Pilgrims Society, much less how members wrecked the Hunts---

<https://www.geni.com/people/Col-John-Jacob-Astor-1st-Baron-Astor-of-Hever> --- I “get it” that these genealogies become tediously complex and we don’t have to square away and nail down all the nooks, crannies and intricacies; you can use the next scan to assist to whatever extent you care to; the point is, “The Plan” carries forward regardless of how many conspiratorial elitists get buried---we’ll do some additional reviewing; the Astors have had huge representation in this Royalist group. According to "Who's Who in America" (1960) page 104 shows the Astor in the above scan (he was born in NYC) was as of 1960 president of Dover College; chairman of Middlesex Hospital; director of Hambros Bank; V.P. of Royal College of Music; president of Newspaper Press Fund; chairman of The Times Publishing Company of London; Lieutenant in The City of London; president of the Press Club; Justice of the Peace for Kent England; president of Commonwealth Press Union; president of National Association for Employment of Sailors, Soldiers & Airmen; president of Hurlingham Club; member Royal Yacht Squadron Club; former director of Phoenix Assurance Company (1952-1956); many other credits in his extensive info including British Broadcasting Corporation and four term chairman of Imperial Press Conferences. The 1966 "Who's Who" page 79 showed he was chairman of London Guarantee & Accident Company 1952-1956. His three sons were Gavin, Hugh and John.

Lord Ashfield (below) was chairman of Underground Electric Railways of London which has an interesting history. Founded in 1902 by Chicago based magnate Charles Tyson Yerkes, a charter Pilgrims member in 1903, Yerkes masterfully defeated the original J.P. Morgan Senior (not a Pilgrims member till 1910; page 8, "The Pilgrims of the United States," 2003) for control of that enterprise. Yerkes dabbled in bribery and blackmail; the great Yerkes Observatory bears his name. I haven't found any of his biographers mentioning his Pilgrims Society membership; they didn't know or if they did, covered it up as he wanted. Ashfield was a director of Midland Bank, Mexican Railway Company and organized large silver user Imperial Chemical Industries in 1926.

David Astor was at some point an exec or partner in Lazard's London, originally a Jewish merchant bank. He was in Lazards for two years, working with his uncle, Lord Brand (Pilgrims Society and Anglican; not Jewish!) As a media baron, he had famous author George Orwell ("1984") working for him. Additionally, David Astor, Pilgrims Society member and nominally a Protestant Christian Anglican Church of England member, offended Jewish advertisers. The Guardian newspaper, London, December 7, 2001, said of David Astor (not mentioning The Pilgrims Society of course) ---

“He initiated an extraordinary range of trusts, charities and pressure groups, luring distinguished people into small groups.”

A trust is where they conceal funds from public view, allowing new rich to appear wealthier than long established rich.

For “distinguished people” read “Pilgrims Society members and members of their important satellite organizations.” His London Observer newspaper reached 655,000 daily subscribers in 1956 to 905,248 in 1967. His mother of course was the same Nancy Astor who urged “young Americans” to enter World War Two on the side of the British (who planned and caused the war). David Astor was “a cofounder of Amnesty International. He endowed the Freud Memorial Chair of Psychoanalysis at University College, London. in 1950, he helped to found the Konigswinter Conference, which still promotes Anglo-German friendship.” (Source---The Telegraph newspaper, London, December 8, 2001). "Chairman of Council of Royal Commonwealth Society, 1972-75; Prime Warden of the Worshipful Company of Goldsmiths, London, 1981-82. Founder of the Astor of Hever Trust, 1955." The Commonwealth is England's partial world government; since The Pilgrims Society controls America, they are even closer to world government than Commonwealth alone---

As of the 1969 info, Astor had been a
Director of Alliance Assurance for 15 years---

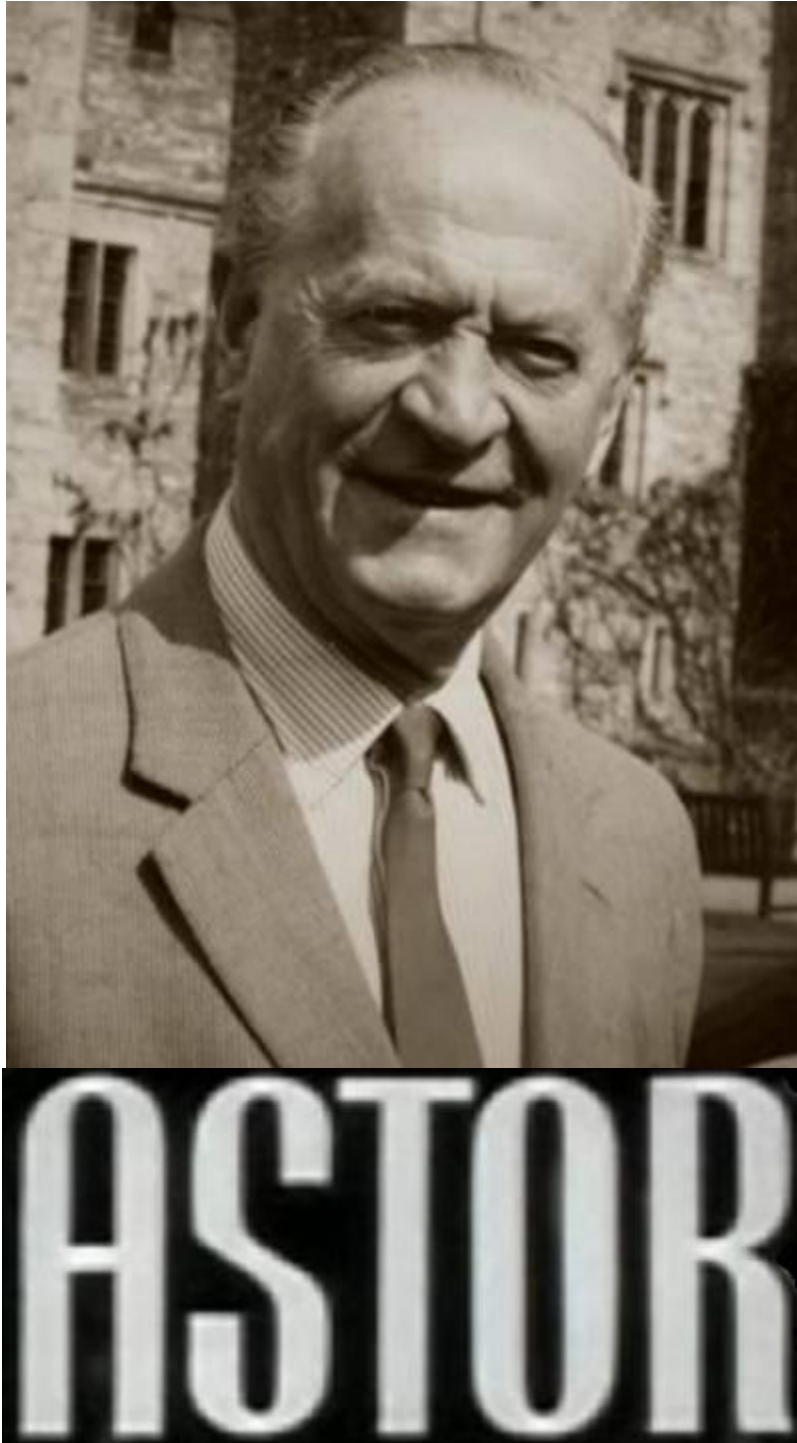

Lord Astor of Hever appeared in the leaked list of The Pilgrims Society of Great Britain for 1980 (see illustration below this one). His father was a member and a director of gold and silver suppressor Barclay's Bank from 1942-1952, of Hambros Bank, an offshoot of which today is The Silver Trust, an organization for silver users, of Phoenix Insurance, Great Western Railway and so forth. Lord Astor's maternal grandfather was the 4th Earl of Minto, Pilgrims Society, who was Governor General of Canada, 1898-1904, and British Viceroy of India, 1905-1910, who continued the silver suppression schemes of his predecessor Viceroy. These Astors all trace to the original John Jacob Astor (1763-1848), the "Landlord of New York," top British collaborator in North American finance who at his zenith was far and away the wealthiest man in North America and participant in the Chinese opium trade, and main domestic power in the gold and silver suppressing second United States Bank (with the DuPonts), headed during 1822-1836 by Nicholas Biddle, whose descendants became Pilgrims Society members and intermarried with other members. The Astors became powers in the Chase National Bank, now a central part of silver antagonist JPMorganChase---

Irene Astor, Baroness Astor of Hever Castle, wife of Gavin Astor (her life 1919-2001) ---

Gavin Astor married Irene Haig in 1945, daughter of The Earl of Haig (1861-1928; surprise, not a Pilgrims member according to rosters I have). Haig, possibly a distant relation to America's Alexander Haig (Pilgrims Society, Defense Secretary), was a British military career officer who fought in the "Mahdist War" in British Sudan; the 1966 movie "Khartoum" with Charlton Heston was typical British Imperialist history rewriting was about the same campaigns Field Marshall Haig was active in. Heston already lied for the British in "55 Days At Peking" (1963) about the 1900 Boxer Rebellion in China; England feels entitled to own the planet. Heston's NRA activities don't get any pardon for him in covering for the British. Haig was also active in the second Boer War (English war atrocities in South Africa) and in World War One, in which some two million British troops died under his command, fighting an enemy England created---Germany. Haig was a member of assorted Orders; Order of the Thistle (traces to 1687); Order of the Bath (traces to 1725; refers to ceremonial bath of purification of a knight after killing the King's enemies); Royal Victorian Order (1896); Order of the Indian Empire (1878).

OKA now has eleven shops across Britain combined with European and American websites. So chic is OKA today that when the Qatari royal family took over sponsorship of Glorious Goodwood they turned their executive lounge-style clubhouse into a near OKA showroom.

I have been to £10-million chalets in Gstaad in which half the furniture is OKA, one reason why Astor can rightfully boast that clients include many billionaires and London's wealthiest families.

With record profits, and a two-year plan to conquer America, OKA is now a global interior brand phenomenon.

Around 75% of motorsport research and development takes place in the UK. The Motorsport Industry Association (MIA) is a global trade association for the motorsport, performance engineering, services and tuning sectors. The MIA represents the specialized needs of this highly successful global industry as it undergoes continuing rapid development throughout the world. It represents the UK motorsport industry at a national level. Around 4,000 companies in the UK are involved in the motorsport industry, with an annual turnover of around £9 billion, with around 70% being exports. It spends 30% of turnover on research and development. There are around 25,000 qualified engineers involved in the UK industry.”

Lord Astor was president of Astor France and Astor Enterprises (activities undetermined). During 1992 he was an official of the Anglo-Swiss Parliamentary Association. He was or is joint treasurer of the British-South African Parliamentary Association. Elected to the British House of Lords of the United Kingdom Parliament in 1999; he is a Liveryman of the Worshipful Company of Goldsmiths guild in the City of London. Additionally we're told he is "president of the Durand Group for First World War research," that has an ominous tone about our future! We could discuss things about his other children Tania, Violet Magdalene and Olivia Alexandra Elizabeth; this suffices. Additionally, Lord Astor is vice president of St. George Memorial Church in Ypres, Belgium, a Church of England church, built to commemorate the 500,000 + British and Commonwealth soldiers who died in the area during World War One (blamed on Germany) ---

At <http://landedfamilies.blogspot.com/2016/08/223-astor-of-cliveden-and-hever.html> we discover about another Astor---

Astor, Michael Ramon Langhorne (b. 1946). Elder and only surviving son of Sir John Jacob Astor (1918-2000) and his first wife, Ana Inez, younger daughter of Dr. Don Miguel Angel Carcano KCMG KBE, Argentine ambassador to the UK, born 29 September 1946. Educated at Eton. He married, 1979, Daphne, daughter of Edward Mortimer Morris Warburg of Westport, Connecticut (USA), and has issue:

- (1) Jessica Nancy Astor;
- (2) Luke Langhorne Astor;
- (3) Heloise Mary Astor.

You read it right; a Warburg of the same family as the Federal Reserve Warburgs. But those not “in the know,” which includes just about every “Jew baiter” out there, would read right past the name MORTIMER and it wouldn’t mean a damn thing to them! There are three Mortimers in the most recent Pilgrims NYC roster we have (2014). There are no Warburgs in either 2014 roster other than possible maternal ancestry! Well! There’s certainly so much more on the Astors; this overview is sufficient! Now we want to look at the DREXEL family; due to this Pilgrims Power couple, John Rozet Drexel IV and Jacqueline ASTOR Drexel whom we saw in the intro! These two dynasties are incredible, and both have history of silver (and gold) suppression! The next installment will have us focusing on the Drexels; and their marriage union with the Astors! Thanks Greg Hunter, SGT Report, X-22 Report, Silver Doctors, Daily Coin, Sarah Windfall, Your Street For Jason’s Street and so forth, for the interview circuit blacklisting!
